Answer: E

NEW QUESTION # 19
What are different ways Product value can be depicted?
What are two ways to measure Product value?
Is releasing work the only way to deliver value? Why or why not?

Answer:

Explanation:
Two ways of describing Product Value:
1. Customer/user value - these are the benefits the customer/user will receive from the product. Solving customer pain points.
2. Business value - the benefits the business will receive from the product. Revenue, profit, employment, etc.
Two ways to measure product value:
1. Customer Usage Index
2. Product Cost Ratio
When working on complex adaptive problems, the value (affect) of the releases can only be perceived in hindsight. This means that the value the product delivers (internally and externally) is best determined by the market response of the product. Releasing to production will help you gather the most valuable feedback and information needed to help you determine what the current value is, determine the unrealized value, understand the team's ability to innovate, and manage the time to market.
For this question observe that there are 4 questions embedded in it and you required to answer each one. For this answer, it is explained the 2 different types of product value, for customer and business, and we also used EBM (Evidence-Based Management) Key Areas to sustain the value description and the answer
