NEW QUESTION # 118

Cloud Kicks wants to apply branding to its current Salesforce org, currently using Lightning Experience. The look and feel must follow company design guidelines.

Which declarative design properties should be used to achieve this?

- A. Create a custom Theme in Themes and Branding, selecting logo, brand colors, and images.
- B. Develop a custom Layout in user interface, attaching a new stylesheet in static resources.
- C. Choose one of the built-in Salesforce themes that closest matches the design guidelines
- D. Design a custom Branding set in use interface, selecting a logo, colors, and font type.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The best way to apply branding to a Salesforce org using Lightning Experience is to create a custom theme in Themes and Branding. Themes and Branding is a feature that allows the administrator to customize the look and feel of Salesforce to match the branding of the organization. The administrator can add logos, default images, and colors to the theme. The administrator can also choose one of the built-in Salesforce themes, or create their own custom themes with just a few clicks. To create a custom theme, from Setup, enter Themes and Branding in the Quick Find box, then select Themes and Branding. Click New Theme and upload the logo, brand colors, and images that follow the company design guidelines. The administrator can also preview and activate the theme for the entire org. Cloud Kicks wants to represent stages for opportunities within the sales process.

Which Salesforce Lightning Designing System (SLDS) component should be recommended?

- A. Path
- B. Scoped Tabs
- C. Activity Timeline
- D. Progress indicator

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Path component is a Salesforce Lightning Design System (SLDS) component that can be used to represent stages for opportunities within the sales process. The Path component displays the stages as a horizontal bar with icons and labels, and highlights the current stage with a blue background. The Path component also allows users to move opportunities to different stages, view and edit key fields for each stage, and access guidance and tips for each stage. NEW QUESTION # 120

Which two resources of the Salesforce Lightning Design System (SLDS) could be used to make custom application look, act, and sound like Salesforce?

Choose 2 answers

- A. Full functional components
- B. Blueprints and tokens
- C. Guidelines for voice and tone
- D. In-App Guidance

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

The Salesforce Lightning Design System (SLDS) is a collection of resources that help you create user interfaces that are consistent with the Salesforce Lightning principles, design language, and best practices. The SLDS resources that could be used to make custom applications look, act, and sound like Salesforce are:

Blueprints and tokens: Blueprints are ready-to-use HTML and CSS UI elements that provide the foundation for Salesforce experience development. Tokens are visual design values and attributes that ensure branding and UI consistency at scale. By using blueprints and tokens, you can create custom components that follow the SLDS design standards and patterns.

Guidelines for voice and tone: Voice and tone guidelines help you write clear, concise, and consistent content that reflects the Salesforce brand personality and values. By using voice and tone guidelines, you can create custom applications that communicate effectively and respectfully with your users.

The SLDS resources that are not relevant to make custom applications look, act, and sound like Salesforce are:

Full functional components: Full functional components are pre-built Lightning components that provide out-of-the-box functionality and interactivity. They are not part of the SLDS, but rather part of the Lightning Component Library. You can use full functional components to speed up your development process, but they are not necessary to make custom applications look, act, and sound like Salesforce.

In-App Guidance: In-App Guidance is a feature that allows you to create and deliver contextual help and training to your users within your application. It is not part of the SLDS, but rather part of the Salesforce Platform. You can use In-App Guidance to enhance your user experience and adoption, but it is not essential to make custom applications look, act, and sound like Salesforce.

NEW QUESTION # 121

What would it mean for the user when designing perceivable content?

- A. The content should only be audible.
- B. The content should not be visible to all senses.
- C. The content should only be visible.
- D. The content should not be visible to all senses.

Answer: C

Explanation:

According to the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG), which are the leading international standards for accessible web design, perceivable content is content that can be presented to users in ways they can perceive. This means that the content should be available to the senses (vision, touch, and hearing) either through the browser or through assistive technologies like screen readers, screen enlargers, and others¹. Therefore, the content should only be visible is the correct answer, as it implies that the content can be seen by users who rely on vision to access the web. The other options are incorrect, as they suggest that the content is not perceivable to all users.

NEW QUESTION # 122

A UX Designer wants to explore sample code for Lightning components and see how changing to code affects the visual appearance in real time, without deploying any code to a Salesforce org.

Which two resources should help accomplish this?

Choose 2 answers

- A. Local Development Server
- B. Lightning Web Component Recipes App
- C. Develop Center's Lightning Component Library
- D. Lightning Design System Website

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Two resources that can help a UX Designer to explore sample code for Lightning components and see how changing the code affects the visual appearance in real time, without deploying any code to a Salesforce org, are:

Lightning Design System Website. The Lightning Design System website is a resource that provides design guidelines, UI components, and code samples for building Lightning applications. The website also features a live code editor that allows the designer to edit and preview the code for Lightning web components and Aura components, and see the changes reflected in the browser instantly. The live code editor also provides syntax highlighting, auto-completion, and error checking features. The designer can use the Lightning Design System website to experiment with different code snippets and learn how to apply the design principles and best practices for Lightning components. Lightning Design System Website, [UX Designer Certification Prep: Salesforce Design System] Local Development Server. The Local Development Server is a resource that allows the designer to build, run, and test Lightning web components without deploying them to a Salesforce org. The Local Development Server is a CLI plug-in that creates a local web server that serves the Lightning web components from the local file system. The designer can use the Local Development Server to edit the code for Lightning web components in their preferred code editor, such as Visual Studio Code, and see the changes updated in the browser automatically. The Local Development Server also supports hot reloading, which preserves the component state and the browser session during code changes. The designer can use the Local Development Server to speed up the development and testing process and to debug the code for Lightning web components. Local Development Server, [UX Designer Certification Prep: User Testing and Evaluation] The Lightning Web Component Recipes App and the Developer Center's Lightning Component Library are not resources that can help a UX Designer to explore sample code for Lightning components and see how changing the code affects the visual appearance in real time, without deploying any code to a Salesforce org. The Lightning Web Component Recipes App is a sample application that showcases the functionality and best practices for Lightning web components. The Developer Center's Lightning Component Library is a reference guide that provides documentation and examples for Lightning web components and Aura components. However, neither of these resources allow the designer to edit and preview the code in real time, as they require the code to be deployed to a Salesforce org or a scratch org first.
