NEW QUESTION # 149

Which of the following prescriptions requires a Medication Guide to be given to the patient?

- A. Metoprolol
- B. Lisinopril
- C. Venlafaxine
- D. Amoxicillin

Answer: C

Explanation:

Medication Guides are required by the FDA for certain drugs that pose serious and significant public health concerns and where patient decision-making should be informed by specific risk information.

Antidepressants, including SNRIs such as venlafaxine, require a Medication Guide due to risks such as suicidality in children, adolescents, and young adults. Common cardiovascular agents like metoprolol and lisinopril, and antibiotics like amoxicillin, do not routinely require an FDA Medication Guide.

References (Pharmacy Technician documents/Study Guides):

- * FDA Medication Guide Program - requirements for distribution with specific drugs/classes (e.g., antidepressants including SNRIs).
- * PTCB/ExCPT study guides: Patient Safety and Drug Information - distribution of FDA Medication Guides.

NEW QUESTION # 150

Pharmacy personnel can participate in medication error prevention by doing which of the following?

- A. Fostering a punitive environment for the reporting of medication errors
- B. Standardizing STAT orders for antineoplastic medications
- C. Developing corrective actions based on review of medication errors reported
- D. Encouraging the use of abbreviations by prescribers when writing medication orders

Answer: C

Explanation:

Medication safety programs emphasize reviewing reported errors and near misses and then implementing corrective actions (process changes, education, checklists, technology safeguards). Encouraging unsafe abbreviations (A) increases error risk. A punitive culture (B) suppresses reporting and undermines safety; a

"just culture" is recommended. While standardization is valuable, "standardizing STAT orders for antineoplastics" (D) is not a typical, broad error-prevention strategy and may conflict with safety controls specific to hazardous drugs.

References (Pharmacy Technician documents / Study Guides):

* ISMP medication safety principles: nonpunitive reporting, analysis, and system-based corrective actions.

* The Joint Commission/ASHP: "Do Not Use" abbreviations and just culture.
