- A. Web application firewall

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation

In Cisco NFVI security architecture, the primary defense against lateral movement (an attacker moving from one compromised node to another) is network segmentation.

Segmentation:

- * Separates workloads (compute, storage, management, tenant networks)
- * Prevents attackers from pivoting inside the NFVI
- * Reduces blast radius during breaches
- * Enforces micro-segmented virtual network boundaries

WPA protects Wi-Fi, not NFVI.

WAF protects web apps, not internal movement.

Data encryption protects confidentiality, not lateral movement control.

Thus, network segmentation is the correct solution.
