- A. Automated deployment to Kubernetes clusters
- B. Executables that define the training process
- C. Input datasets stored in a hyperscaler object store
- D. The SAP HANA database for model storage

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

The training pipeline in SAP AI Core comprises several key components that facilitate the development and deployment of machine learning models.

1. Input Datasets Stored in a Hyperscaler Object Store:

* Data Storage: Input datasets are often stored in hyperscaler object stores, which provide scalable and secure storage solutions.

These datasets serve as the foundational data for training machine learning models.

* Integration: SAP AI Core integrates with various hyperscaler object stores, allowing seamless access to training data during the model development process.

NEW QUESTION # 29

You want to download a json output for a prompt and the response.

Which of the following interfaces can you use in SAP's generative AI hub in SAP AI Launchpad?

- A. Chat
- B. Prompt management
- C. Prompt Editor
- D. Administration

Answer: B

Explanation:

* Prompt management is the section within SAP's generative AI hub (accessed via the SAP AI Launchpad) where you work with prompts, including:

* Creating and saving prompts: You can write and store your prompts for later use.

* Viewing prompt history: You can see a record of your past prompts and the AI's responses.

* Exporting prompts and responses: This is where you'd find the option to download your prompt and its corresponding response in JSON format.

Why the other options are incorrect:

* A. Chat: The chat interface is where you have interactive conversations with the generative AI. While you can see your conversation history there, you wouldn't typically find options to download it in JSON format.

* C. Administration: The administration section focuses on managing settings and configurations for the AI hub, not on individual prompts and responses.

* D. Prompt Editor: While a prompt editor might be used to create and refine prompts, it wouldn't necessarily be the place to manage or download them.
