Salesforce Certified Integration Architect Sample Questions (Q58-Q63):

NEW QUESTION # 58

A company wants to standardize exception tracking, handling, and analytics. Given the following actions:

1. Build a company wide logging service hosted on a middleware platform
  2. Create case object records for exceptions based thresholds
  3. Change all their Apex Loggers to publish Application Exceptions as custom Platform Events.
- Which two specifications should the integration architect include in the logging service architecture?
Choose 2 answers

- A. Create Salesforce Cases using the Salesforce REST, SOAP or Bulk API.
- B. Subscribe to the Application Exceptions using the Salesforce Streaming API.
- C. Receive Application Events through Change Data Capture (CDC).
- D. Create Salesforce Cases conditionally using automatic Case creation rules.

Answer: A,D

NEW QUESTION # 59

When user clicks Check Preferences as part of a Lightning flow in Salesforce, preferences from an externally hosted RESTful service are to be checked in real-time. The RESTful service has OpenAPI 2.0 JSON definitions, responding in data types of Boolean and string values.

Which integration pattern and mechanism should be selected to meet the conditions?

- A. Remote Call-In: Salesforce REST API with REST Composite Resources.
- B. Fire and Forget: Process-driven platform events publishes events on Salesforce Event Bus.
- C. Request-Reply: Enhanced External Services invokes a REST API.
- D. Data Virtualization: Salesforce Connect map data external REST data in external objects.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The correct answer is C, Request-Reply: Enhanced External Services invokes a REST API. This is because Enhanced External Services allows you to register an external web service that has an OpenAPI 2.0 specification and use it as an invocable action in a Lightning flow. This way, you can check the preferences from the external service in real-time and get the response in Boolean and string values. The other options are not suitable for this scenario because:

A, Fire and Forget: Process-driven platform events publishes events on Salesforce Event Bus, is a pattern that is used for asynchronous integration, where the sender does not expect a response from the receiver. This is not suitable for checking preferences in real-time.

B, Remote Call-In: Salesforce REST API with REST Composite Resources, is a pattern that is used for integrating external applications with Salesforce by calling the Salesforce REST API. This is not suitable for invoking an external service from a Lightning flow.

D, Data Virtualization: Salesforce Connect map data external REST data in external objects, is a pattern that is used for accessing external data without copying or synchronizing it to Salesforce. This is not suitable for checking preferences in real-time or using them in a Lightning flow.
