Which THREE of the following would be considered advantages of establishing the subsidiary in the foreign country?

- A. There are restrictions on companies wishing to remit profit from the foreign country.
- B. The corporate tax rate in the foreign country is 40%.
- C. There are high customs duties payable on products entering the foreign country.
- D. There is a double tax treaty between the company's domestic country and the foreign country.
- E. Year 1 tax depreciation allowances of 100% are available in the foreign country.

Answer: C,D,E

NEW QUESTION # 85

Company C has received an unwelcome takeover bid from Company P.

Company P is approximately twice the size of Company C based on market capitalisation.

Although the two companies have some common business interests, the main aim of the bid is diversification for Company P.

The offer from Company P is a share exchange of 2 shares in Company P for 3 shares in Company C.

There is a cash alternative of $5.50 for each Company C share.

Company C has substantial cash balances which the directors were planning to use to fund an acquisition.

These plans have not been announced to the market.

The following share price information is relevant. All prices are in $.

Which of the following would be the most appropriate action by Company C's directors following receipt of this hostile bid?

- A. Write to shareholders explaining fully why the company's share price is under valued.
- B. Pay a one-off special dividend.
- C. Change the Articles of Association to increase the percentage of shareholder votes required to approve a takeover.
- D. Refer the bid to the country's competition authorities.

8.24

NEW QUESTION # 88

Which THREE of the following statements are true of a money market hedge?

- A. They offer roughly the same outcome as a forward contract.
- B. They may be a little more flexible in comparison to a forward contract.
- C. They are more complex than forward contracts.
- D. They are easy to set up.
- E. They leave the company exposed to currency risks.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

In CIMA F3, a money market hedge is a contractual-style hedge created using the spot rate today plus borrowing/lending in the two currencies to lock in a known domestic-currency outcome for a future foreign-currency receipt or payment. Under interest rate parity, the synthetic forward rate implied by money-market borrowing and lending is broadly consistent with the forward market, so the hedge typically delivers roughly the same outcome as a forward contract (A). Unlike leaving the position unhedged, the money market hedge does not leave the company exposed to currency risk once set up because the future cash flows are effectively fixed through today's borrow/lend transactions (so B is false). Because a money market hedge can be tailored using available loan/deposit maturities and amounts (and can sometimes be implemented when a forward is unavailable or less convenient), it may be a little more flexible than a forward in practical terms (C).

However, it requires multiple steps-borrow or invest, convert at spot, and invest/repay-so it is more complex than a forward contract (D). "Easy to set up" is not usually considered a defining advantage versus forwards because it depends on access to credit lines and money-market instruments (so E is not selected).
