PMI Agile Certified Practitioner (PMI-ACP)® Sample Questions (Q61-Q66):

NEW QUESTION # 61

An agile facilitator is helping a team. The team is taking too long in each daily coordination meeting, and the facilitator is beginning to view the time as unproductive.

What should the agile facilitator do to help the team?

- A. Reduce the number of participants in the daily coordination meeting so only one representative for each user story or area of expertise can participate each day.
- B. Let team members decide how to execute the meeting because they are self-organized and should know what works for them
- C. Pay attention to the comments of each team member during the meeting and intervene every time they deviate from the objective of the meeting.
- D. Change the structure of the daily coordination meetings so team members only comment on the blockers they face during the day.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The agile facilitator should focus on keeping the daily coordination meeting (daily stand-up) focused and efficient. If the meeting is becoming unproductive or lengthy, the facilitator needs to actively manage the flow and intervene when team members deviate from the meeting's objective, which is to quickly discuss progress, identify blockers, and align on the work for the day. By doing this, the facilitator can help the team maintain the purpose and time-box of the meeting, which is generally 15 minutes.

NEW QUESTION # 62

Several team members have complained to senior management about their scrum master's processes. What should the scrum master do to address the team's process concerns?

- A. Include process feedback in the next sprint planning session.
- B. Include senior management in the process decisions.
- C. Communicate the processes and expectations to the team.
- D. Conduct retrospectives at the end of every sprint.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 63

An agile coach is working on a software development project. Their team is approaching the sprint deadline, but their client is requesting to include additional features that will bring added value.

What should the agile coach do to address this requirement?

An agile coach is working on a software development project. Their team is approaching the sprint deadline, but their client is requesting to include additional features that will bring added value.

What should the agile coach do to address this requirement?

- A. Remind the team and the client of the importance of assessing the risks of these features before deciding to include them
- B. Ask the client for an extension of the deadline to enable delivery of this sprint with the additional features.
- C. Negotiate with the team to add the additional features in this sprint because they are important requirements.
- D. Explain to the client that the sprint deadline is approaching and the feature can be included in the next iteration.

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Agile, it's important to maintain focus on the current sprint's goals and scope. Since the sprint deadline is approaching, adding additional features may compromise the team's ability to deliver the planned work on time. The best approach is to explain to the client that the new features can be considered for the next sprint, ensuring that the team can finish the current work and deliver value on time. This also allows the team to properly plan for the new features in the next iteration without overloading the current sprint.
