NEW QUESTION # 187

Which kind of drawing should a technician refer to in order to determine how to hang a loudspeaker line array?

- A. reflected ceiling plan
- B. section
- C. detail
- D. elevation

Answer: B

Explanation:

A detail drawing provides specific, comprehensive information about particular elements of a project, such as how to hang a loudspeaker line array. These drawings include precise measurements, materials, and installation instructions, allowing technicians to understand the exact requirements and procedures for mounting the equipment. Detail drawings ensure that all aspects of the installation are clearly communicated and followed, preventing errors and ensuring a safe and effective setup.

NEW QUESTION # 188

Milestones are key events or deliverables in a project. On a Gantt Chart or Network Diagram, milestones are represented by a(n)

- A. diamond or triangle.
- B. asterisk or apostrophe.
- C. square or rectangle.
- D. circle or oval.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The frequency identified by the numbers above each slider of a graphic equalizer is the center frequency. The center frequency is the specific frequency that each slider controls, allowing the user to boost or cut the amplitude of that frequency and those in its immediate vicinity. This helps in fine-tuning the audio signal to achieve the desired sound quality.

Reference: Audio equipment manuals and equalizer usage guidelines, such as those from Axis Communications and other audio equipment manufacturers, explain the function of center frequencies in graphic equalizers.

NEW QUESTION # 189

Reverberant sound reaches the listener's ears

- A. after
- B. before
- C. synchronized with
- D at the same level as the direct sound.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Reverberant sound reaches the listener's ears after the direct sound. This occurs because reverberant sound is reflected off various surfaces within a space, such as walls, ceilings, and floors, before arriving at the listener.

The time delay between the arrival of the direct sound and the reverberant sound contributes to the sense of space and ambience in an environment.

NEW QUESTION # 190

Which of the following terms is defined as a lamp that produces light by heating a filament in a sealed glass housing?

- A. Incandescent Lamp
- B. LED Lamp
- C. Fluorescent Lamp
- D. CFL Lamp

Answer: A

Explanation:

Incandescent lamps generate light by heating a filament inside a glass enclosure. This process is different from fluorescent, CFL, and LED lamps, which rely on gas discharge or semiconductor technology rather than a heated filament.

NEW QUESTION # 191

Two computers are connected to a videoconferencing system through a switcher using HDMI cables.

Computer content from PC A is being properly transmitted. However, when PC B is selected by the switcher, it does not work through the videoconferencing system. They both work when connected directly to the videoconferencing system or the monitor.

The solution is to add a device that enables ____ management.

- A. HDCP
- B. TMDS
- C. DDC
- D. DHCP

Answer: A

Explanation:

The issue described is likely due to HDCP (High-bandwidth Digital Content Protection) incompatibility.

Since PC B does not work through the switcher but works directly, it indicates an HDCP handshake issue between the switcher and PC B. Adding an HDCP-compliant device, such as an HDCP-compliant switcher or repeater, can resolve this issue by ensuring that content protection protocols are properly managed.

CTS Technology Specialist Reference

CTS materials on digital video highlight the importance of HDCP management when dealing with protected content in HDMI connections, especially in videoconferencing systems.
