- D. ITSM Asset Management and ServiceNow My Assets mobile app
- E. ITSM Asset Management and ServiceNow Agent mobile app

Explanation:
A blind audit is a type of inventory audit that does not provide any information about the expected assets in a location. The auditor scans all the assets in the location and compares them with the records in ServiceNow1.
To perform a blind audit, you need the Hardware Asset Management (HAM) application, which enables you to manage the lifecycle of your hardware assets, and the ServiceNow Agent mobile app, which allows you to scan asset tags and barcodes using your mobile device12.
The ServiceNow My Assets mobile app is used to view and request assets from the enterprise asset catalog, not to perform audits3.
The Software Asset Management (SAM) application is used to optimize software licenses and compliance, not to perform audits4.
The ITSM Asset Management application is used to track the financial, contractual, and inventory details of hardware and devices, not to perform audits. References:

The Content Service normalizes or enriches the following fields for hardware assets:
Device type: The Content Service identifies the type of device, such as laptop, desktop, server, tablet, etc., based on the discovery data and assigns a standardized value to the device type field1.
Manufacturer: The Content Service normalizes the manufacturer name, such as Dell, HP, Lenovo, etc., based on the discovery data and assigns a standardized value to the manufacturer field1.
Memory: The Content Service enriches the memory field with the amount of RAM installed on the device, such as 8 GB, 16 GB, 32 GB, etc., based on the discovery data1.
Hardware model: The Content Service normalizes the hardware model name, such as Latitude E7450, ProLiant DL380 G7, ThinkPad T480, etc., based on the discovery data and assigns a standardized value to the hardware model field1.
