- A. Contact Record page
- B. User Record page from Setup
- C. User Profile page

Answer: B

Explanation:

The place where the employee should update their name and email address changes is the User Record page from Setup. The User Record page is where the employee can view and edit their personal information, such as name, email, username, alias, and profile. The employee can access the User Record page by clicking on their profile icon and then clicking Settings. Then, they can click on Personal Information under My Personal Information and edit their name and email address. The User Profile page is where the employee can view and edit their profile picture, about me, title, and contact information, but not their name and email address. The Contact Record page is where the employee can view and edit their contact details, such as phone, address, and social media accounts, but not their name and email address.

What should be considered before changing the field type of a custom field?

- A. The field is a required field that cannot be changed.
- B. The field type can be changed for all custom field.
- C. There is possible data loss when changing the field type.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Changing the field type of a custom field may result in data loss if the new field type is incompatible with the existing data. For example, changing a text field to a number field may cause the loss of alphanumeric values. The field type can be changed for most custom fields, but not all. For example, changing a master-detail field to a lookup field is not allowed. The field being a required field does not affect the ability to change the field type.

Get Cloudy Consulting wants to implement Salesforce within its sales and service divisions, and automate several processes that involve both.

Which approach should they explore first?

- A. Declarative
- B. Third-party consulting services
- C. Programmatic

Answer: A

Explanation:

Declarative tools in Salesforce allow for process automation without the need for code. These tools, such as Process Builder, Flow Builder, and Approval Processes, enable users to configure automation that spans multiple divisions like sales and service. This approach is user-friendly, cost-effective, and faster to implement compared to programmatic solutions.

* B. Programmatic: Programmatic approaches (e.g., Apex code) should be used when declarative tools cannot meet specific complex requirements.

* C. Third-party consulting services: While consulting services may assist with implementation, exploring Salesforce's native tools should be the first approach.

References from Salesforce Documentation:
