NEW QUESTION # 102

For a comprehensive backup strategy in PowerProtect Data Manager, what is essential when dealing with large-scale data?

- A. High-capacity storage devices
- B. Multi-threaded backup processes
- C. Regular data archiving

- D. Data deduplication and compression

Answer: D

Explanation:

In modern data centers, the sheer volume of data makes traditional backup methods inefficient. PowerProtect Data Manager is built to integrate natively with PowerProtect DD (Data Domain) to provide an efficient "protection storage" layer.

* Data Deduplication: This is the most critical factor for large-scale data. By identifying redundant data blocks at the source (via DD Boost) or at the target, PPDM significantly reduces the amount of data that must be transmitted over the network and stored on physical disks.

* Compression: Following deduplication, compression further reduces the data footprint. Together, these technologies allow organizations to store petabytes of logical data on significantly smaller physical footprints, making long-term retention and large-scale protection economically and operationally feasible.

* Efficiency: Without deduplication, the bandwidth and storage capacity required to handle daily incremental and weekly full backups for large-scale environments would be unsustainable.
