- B. EX4100
- C. EX4300

Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION # 57

Which routing protocol does EVPN utilize for the control plane?

- A. VXLAN
- B. OSPF
- C. MP-BGP
- D. IS-IS

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 58

What are two limitations of using LLDP for identifying wired clients? (Choose two.)

- A. It only operates between directly connected devices.
- B. It is not scalable to large networks.
- C. It requires LLDP to be configured on network devices.
- D. It is supported by all wired client devices.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Link Layer Discovery Protocol (LLDP) is a Layer 2 discovery protocol that allows network devices to advertise identity and capabilities to directly connected neighbors. While LLDP is useful for basic topology discovery, it has two key limitations in Wired Assurance client identification:

"LLDP operates at Layer 2 between directly connected devices and must be explicitly enabled on all participating network elements to provide neighbor information. It cannot discover devices beyond the first physical hop." Option A: Correct - LLDP must be configured and enabled on each network device to function.

Option B: Incorrect - LLDP itself is scalable but limited to direct adjacency.

Option C: Correct - LLDP only works between directly connected devices.

Option D: Incorrect - not all clients support LLDP; however, the question asks for limitations of using LLDP, not lack of support.

NEW QUESTION # 59

Which three steps should be part of the campus fabric deployment? (Choose three.)

- A. Choose the topology.
- B. Define the networks of interest.

- C. Configure the group-based policy (GBP) tag.
- D. Define the physical connections.
- E. Configure the DNS server.

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

According to the Juniper Mist AI for Wired - Campus Fabric IP CLOS Deployment Workflow, deploying a campus fabric involves a defined sequence of planning and configuration steps within the Mist Cloud interface. The key stages include:

"To deploy a campus fabric, you must first define the topology type, identify the physical connections between devices, and define the networks of interest that will be extended across the fabric." Breaking this down:

Choose the topology (D): Selecting the correct fabric type (3-Stage or 5-Stage IP CLOS) determines how access, distribution, and core switches will interconnect.

Define the physical connections (A): This step involves specifying the uplink and downlink relationships between switches so that Mist can auto-generate EVPN-VXLAN and routing configurations.

Define the networks of interest (B): These are the VLANs and subnets that need to be extended across the fabric for user and device connectivity.

Steps such as configuring DNS servers or defining GBP tags are not part of the campus fabric deployment workflow in Mist Wired; they are optional or separate configurations outside the main deployment flow.
