- B. Trying to connect to randomly generated domains to obfuscate C2 traffic
- C. Intercepting packets to steal sensitive data
- D. Logging keystrokes to capture user credentials

Answer: B

Explanation:

DGA stands for Domain Generation Algorithm. It is a technique used by malware (such as ransomware or botnets) to periodically generate a large number of domain names that serve as rendezvous points with their Command and Control (C2) servers. By rapidly changing the domains they attempt to connect to, attackers obfuscate their traffic and make it highly difficult for static blocklists or basic firewall rules to stop the communication. VMware vDefend's Network Traffic Analysis (NTA) features specific detectors to identify this anomalous DNS behavior associated with DGA.
