CompTIA A+ Core 1 Exam (2026) Sample Questions (Q22-Q27):

NEW QUESTION # 22

A company is separating its accounting department's network from its customer service department's network. Which of the following will accomplish this task?

- A. VLAN
- B. DNS
- C. DHCP
- D. VPN

Answer: A

Explanation:

VLANs (Virtual Local Area Networks) are used to segment a single physical network switch into multiple logical, isolated networks. This allows an administrator to separate traffic from different departments (like accounting and customer service) even if the computers are connected to the same physical networking equipment, without needing to install separate physical cabling and devices. This improves security by ensuring sensitive accounting data is segregated from other network traffic.

NEW QUESTION # 23

A customer experiences a power outage at their data center. After the outage, one server with three hard drives in RAID 5 does not come back online. When a technician connects to the server, they receive a message stating that Drive 3 has failed. Which of the following steps should the technician take next to minimize the risk of data loss?

- A. Perform a full drive restore from the most recent backup.
- B. Upgrade the firmware on the drives.
- C. Replace the defective drive and trigger an array rebuild.
- D. Acknowledge the drive error and allow the system to start normally.

Answer: C

Explanation:

RAID 5 provides fault tolerance by distributing parity information across all drives, allowing the array to continue operating if one drive fails. In a three-drive RAID 5 set, a single disk failure puts the array into a degraded state where it can still function, but it is at higher risk because losing a second drive before recovery would cause data loss. Since the system reports Drive 3 has failed after a power outage, the best next step to minimize risk is to replace the failed drive immediately and start the rebuild. Rebuilding regenerates the missing data blocks onto the new drive using parity, returning the array to a protected state.

Option B leaves the array degraded and increases exposure to a second failure. Option C (firmware upgrade) is not a first response in an active failure scenario and can introduce additional risk or downtime. Option D (restore from backup) is typically used when the array is unrecoverable or multiple drives fail; it is more disruptive and unnecessary when RAID 5 can recover from a single-disk failure. Therefore, replacing the defective drive and triggering an array rebuild is the correct next step.

NEW QUESTION # 24

An office manager wants to block all outbound internet traffic but continue to enable all inbound traffic. Which of the following should a technician configure to achieve this goal?

- A. MAC filtering
- B. Firewall
- C. Switch
- D. Network interface card

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

A firewall allows for detailed traffic control, including blocking outbound connections while allowing inbound ones. This is contrary to typical security setups, but it can be configured via advanced firewall rules.

NEW QUESTION # 25

A customer experiences a power outage at their data center. After the outage, one server with three hard drives in RAID 5 does not come back online. When a technician connects to the server, they receive a message stating that Drive 3 has failed. Which of the following steps should the technician take next to minimize the risk of data loss?

- A. Perform a full drive restore from the most recent backup.
- B. Upgrade the firmware on the drives.
- C. Replace the defective drive and trigger an array rebuild.
- D. Acknowledge the drive error and allow the system to start normally.

Answer: C

Explanation:

RAID 5 provides fault tolerance for a single drive failure by using parity. Replacing the failed drive and initiating a rebuild restores redundancy and reconstructs the lost data using the remaining drives, minimizing the risk of data loss.

NEW QUESTION # 26

A company is testing the latest model of a laptop. After turning on the laptop, there is a noticeable burning smell. Which of the following steps should a technician take to troubleshoot the laptop issue? (Select two).

- A. Remove the device from the MDM.
- B. Contact the vendor and submit a return request.
- C. Try an alternate AC adapter.
- D. Turn it off and disconnect all power sources.
- E. Submit an emergency request to the local facilities manager.
- F. Check for foreign objects, liquid spills, and internal damage.

Answer: D,F

Explanation:

When a technician encounters a burning smell, it is a critical safety issue. The first response must be to immediately power down and disconnect the device from all power sources to prevent electric shock, fire, or further hardware damage.

From the CompTIA A+ 220-1101 Official Study Guide, Objective 4.1 - Troubleshoot common hardware problems:

"Signs of electrical issues such as burning smells, smoke, or sparks require an immediate shutdown of the system and disconnection from any power source." After ensuring safety, the technician should inspect the hardware for visible signs of damage:

From the same Objective (4.1):

"Inspect for foreign objects, liquid damage, or burnt components. These can cause short circuits or thermal events that may damage the motherboard or other internal components." These steps are standard practice in the industry to ensure safe and accurate diagnosis of faulty devices.

Trying a different adapter (Option F) may make the problem worse, and contacting vendors (Option D) comes after initial safety and inspection.
