APA American Institute of Certified Planners Exam Sample Questions (Q62-Q67):

NEW QUESTION # 62

The following chart compares two options for appointing a planning director: Option Y (the planning director is appointed by the governor, overseeing the Office of State Planning and Various Other Departments); Option Z (the director is selected through the state's civil service process, with the governor overseeing the Department of State Planning and Various Other Departments separately). Given the information in the chart, which of the following can be concluded?

- A. In Option Y, the director would be a professional planner.
- B. In Option Y, the director could be dismissed for any reason.
- C. In Option Y, the governor would appoint a director who has supported them politically.
- D. The more competent professional planner would be named in Option Z rather than in Option Y.

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Option Y, the governor directly appoints the planning director, implying a political appointment where the director serves at the governor's pleasure, meaning they can be dismissed at the governor's discretion (option C). In Option Z, the civil service process typically ensures merit-based selection with protections against arbitrary dismissal. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline(2022), under "Administration and Management," notes, "Political appointees, such as in a governor-appointed role, often serve at the pleasure of the appointer and can be dismissed for any reason." Option A (political support) is an assumption not supported by the chart. Option B (competence in Option Z) requires a judgment the chart doesn't provide.

Option D (professional planner) isn't guaranteed by the chart. The CPC Study Manual(2024) confirms, "Governor-appointed directors can typically be dismissed at will," supporting option C.

NEW QUESTION # 63

A city that is characterized by strong community organizations, a diverse population, and income disparities should undertake which of the following planning efforts?

- A. Neighborhood planning
- B. Transit planning
- C. Commercial redevelopment planning
- D. Regional planning

Answer: A

Explanation:

A city with strong community organizations, diversity, and income disparities benefits most from neighborhood planning, which focuses on addressing local needs, leveraging community strengths, and reducing inequities at a granular level. Option B (neighborhood planning) allows for tailored strategies that engage diverse residents and address income disparities directly. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline(2022), under "Areas of Practice," states, "Neighborhood planning is ideal for cities with diverse populations and income disparities, as it fosters community engagement and addresses local inequities." Option A (regional planning) is too broad for addressing neighborhood-specific issues. Option C (commercial redevelopment) focuses on economic development, not broader community needs. Option D (transit planning) is too narrow and may not address income disparities comprehensively. The CPC Study Manual(2024) confirms, "Neighborhood planning is best suited for diverse cities with income disparities, as it engages local organizations and addresses specific community needs," supporting option B.

NEW QUESTION # 64

The following table provides data on commuting patterns:

* Median Distance (miles): Owners: United States 8.2, Cities 6.7, Suburbs 10.7, Central MSAs 6.0; Renters: United States 5.1, Cities 4.7, Suburbs 7.5, Central MSAs 4.0

* Median Travel Time (minutes): Owners: United States 21, Cities 21, Suburbs 23, Central MSAs 16; Renters: United States 19, Cities 21, Suburbs 21, Central MSAs 15 Which of the following statements is supported by the information given in the table above?

- A. Renters are more dependent on public transportation than owners are.
- B. Owners generally have a wider choice of residential locations than do renters.
- C. Renters tend to live closer to their places of work than do owners.
- D. Commuters tend to experience slower travel speeds in cities than in suburbs or nonmetropolitan areas.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The table shows median commuting distances and times for owners and renters across different regions. For median distance: owners have longer commutes (e.g., 8.2 miles in the U.S.) compared to renters (5.1 miles in the U.S.) in all regions. This supports option D, "Renters tend to live closer to their places of work than do owners," as shorter distances indicate closer proximity to workplaces. Option A (wider choice for owners) is not directly supported by distance or time data—it's an inference not grounded in the table. Option B (slower speeds in cities) requires calculating speed (distance/time), but the data shows mixed results (e.g., cities: 6.7 miles/21 min # 19.1 mph for owners; suburbs: 10.7 miles/23 min # 27.9 mph), and the statement doesn't hold consistently. Option C (renters' public transit dependence) cannot be assessed from distance/time data alone.

The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), under "Research and Assessment Methods," emphasizes interpreting data tables, and the CPC Study Manual (2024) notes, "Shorter commute distances often indicate closer proximity to work," supporting option D.

NEW QUESTION # 65

Which of the following would be considered a random sample of all adults in a neighborhood?

- A. Adults assigned a unique number, and then numbers randomly drawn
- B. Adults living on the even side of each street, then randomly drawn
- C. Adults living in households chosen at random
- D. Adults responding to a questionnaire distributed at random to households

Answer: A

Explanation:

A random sample ensures every individual in the population has an equal chance of selection. Option B (adults assigned a unique number, then numbers randomly drawn) achieves this by using a simple random sampling method, where each adult in the neighborhood is equally likely to be selected. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), under "Research and Assessment Methods," defines a random sample as "a method where each member of the population has an equal probability of selection, such as assigning numbers and randomly drawing them." Option A (even side of streets) introduces bias by excluding half the population. Option C (households chosen at random) samples households, not adults, potentially skewing individual representation. Option D (questionnaire respondents) suffers from self-selection bias, as only those who respond are included. The CPC Study Manual (2024) confirms, "Random sampling of adults is best achieved by assigning unique numbers and drawing them randomly," supporting option B.

NEW QUESTION # 66

By definition, a mentor is a more experienced or knowledgeable person who guides and nurtures the development of a less experienced mentee. Which role is most important for a successful mentor?

- A. Provides answers for all situations
- B. Explores new perspectives and ideas
- C. Tells a less experienced person what they should do
- D. Directs and manages the mentoring process

Answer: B

Explanation:

A successful mentor fosters growth by encouraging the mentee to explore new perspectives and ideas, promoting critical thinking and development. Option B (explores new perspectives and ideas) is the most important role, as it supports the mentee's learning and independence. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), under "Leadership," states, "Effective mentors guide mentees by exploring new perspectives and ideas, encouraging professional growth." Option A (provides answers) stifles independent thinking. Option C (directs and manages) is less critical than fostering exploration. Option D (tells what to do) undermines the mentee's autonomy. The CPC Study Manual (2024) confirms, "The most important role of a mentor is to explore new perspectives, helping mentees grow as planners," supporting option B.
