CompTIA Data+ Exam (2025) Sample Questions (Q78-Q83):

NEW QUESTION # 78
Which of the following is the best reason for a company to use a CSV file to share data instead of an Excel file?

- A. CSV files can store different types of encoding.
- B. CSV files are smaller in size.
- C. CSV files are easier to change in text editors.
- D. CSV files are not vendor-specific.

Answer: D

Explanation:
This question pertains to the Data Concepts and Environments domain, focusing on file formats for data sharing. The task is to identify the best reason to choose CSV over Excel for sharing data.
* CSV files can store different types of encoding (Option A): While CSV files can use different encodings, this isn't the primary reason to choose them over Excel.

* CSV files are not vendor-specific (Option B): CSV is a plain-text format that can be opened by any software, unlike Excel files, which are tied to Microsoft Excel, making CSV more interoperable and the best reason for sharing.
* CSV files are smaller in size (Option C): CSV files are often smaller due to their simplicity, but this isn't always the primary reason for sharing.
* CSV files are easier to change in text editors (Option D): While true, this isn't the most compelling reason for sharing data across systems.
The DA0-002 Data Concepts and Environments domain includes understanding "data schemas and dimensions," and CSV's vendor-neutral nature makes it ideal for sharing data.

NEW QUESTION # 79
A manager wants a report that contains the days off for each direct report. The manager needs this report to always be up-to-date with the latest data. Which of the following describes the refresh frequency that the manager is requesting?

- A. Ad hoc
- B. Dynamic
- C. Snapshot
- D. Real-time

Answer: D

Explanation:
This question pertains to the Visualization and Reporting domain, focusing on report refresh frequencies.
The manager needs the report to always be up-to-date, implying continuous data updates.
* Real-time (Option A): Real-time refresh frequency ensures the report reflects the latest data as soon as it changes, which matches the requirement to "always be up-to-date."
* Ad hoc (Option B): Ad hoc reports are generated on-demand, not continuously updated.
* Snapshot (Option C): A snapshot captures data at a specific point in time, not suitable for always being up-to-date.
* Dynamic (Option D): Dynamic reports allow interactivity, but the term doesn't specifically imply real-time updates.
The DA0-002 Visualization and Reporting domain includes "the appropriate visualization in the form of a report" with delivery methods, and real-time refresh frequency ensures the report is always current.

NEW QUESTION # 80
A data analyst receives an email from the IT department about renewing the company password, and the analyst follows the password reset link as required. Later in the week, the analyst receives the following notification when running a recurring analysis that connects to the database:
Log-in failed for user '<username>'
Which of the following is most likely the reason for this issue?

- A. The company changed its database authentication method.
- B. The analyst did not change the password used to launch the report.
- C. The password expiration process locked the account.
- D. The company is experiencing issues with password replication.

Answer: B

Explanation:
This question falls under the Data Governance domain, focusing on data access and security troubleshooting.
The analyst reset their password, but the recurring analysis failed to log in, indicating a mismatch.
* The company changed its database authentication method (Option A): This would affect all users, not just the analyst, and there's no indication of a broader change.
* The password expiration process locked the account (Option B): The analyst reset the password as required, so the account isn't likely locked due to expiration.
* The analyst did not change the password used to launch the report (Option C): Recurring analyses often use stored credentials. If the analyst updated their password but didn't update the stored credentials for the analysis, the login would fail, making this the most likely reason.
* The company is experiencing issues with password replication (Option D): This is possible but less likely without evidence of broader system issues.

The DA0-002 Data Governance domain includes "data privacy concepts," and ensuring stored credentials match updated passwords is a common issue in recurring analyses.

NEW QUESTION # 81

A user needs a report that shows the main causes of customer churn rate in a three-year period. Which of the following methods provides this information?

- A. Inferential
- B. Descriptive
- C. Predictive
- D. Prescriptive

Answer: B

Explanation:

This question falls under theData Analysisdomain, focusing on analytical methods for reporting. The task is to identify the causes of customer churn over three years, which involves analyzing historical data.

* Inferential (Option A): Inferential statistics make predictions or generalizations about a population, not focused on identifying causes in historical data.

* Descriptive (Option B): Descriptive analytics summarizes historical data to identify patterns and causes (e.g., reasons for churn), which fits the task.

* Prescriptive (Option C): Prescriptive analytics provides recommendations, which goes beyond identifying causes.

* Predictive (Option D): Predictive analytics forecasts future outcomes, not focused on historical causes.

The DA0-002 Data Analysis domain includes "applying the appropriate descriptive statistical methods," and descriptive analytics is best for identifying causes in historical data.

NEW QUESTION # 82

Given the following table:

ID

Value

1.5

24.456

113

Which of the following data types should an analyst use for the numeric values in the Value column?

- A. Float
- B. Boolean
- C. Double
- D. Integer

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question falls under theData Concepts and Environmentsdomain of CompTIA Data+ DA0-002, focusing on selecting appropriate data types for a given dataset. The Value column contains decimal numbers (1.5, 24.456, 113), requiring a data type that supports such values.

* Double (Option A): Double is a floating-point data type that supports decimals with higher precision than Float, but it's often overkill for typical datasets unless very high precision is needed, which isn't indicated here.

* Float (Option B): Float is a floating-point data type that supports decimal numbers (e.g., 1.5, 24.456) and is commonly used for such values in databases, making it the best choice.

* Boolean (Option C): Boolean is for true/false values, not numeric data.

* Integer (Option D): Integer is for whole numbers, but the values (e.g., 1.5, 24.456) have decimals, so Integer is not suitable.

The DA0-002 Data Concepts and Environments domain includes understanding "data schemas and dimensions," such as selecting data types like Float for decimal numeric values.
