Huawei HCIP-Transmission V2.5 Sample Questions (Q59-Q64):

NEW QUESTION # 59
To prevent the optical power at the receive end of an OTU board from being excessively high, you must configure a fixed attenuator according to the actual optical power. The fixed attenuator is usually configured at the transmit end.

- A. TRUE
- B. FALSE

Answer: B

Explanation:
The fixed attenuator is usually configured at the receive end, not the transmit end, to prevent the optical power at the receive end of an OTU (Optical Transport Unit) board from being excessively high. High optical power at the receiver can cause signal distortion or damage the receiver module. Configuring the attenuator at the receive end ensures that the incoming signal power is within the optimal sensitivity range of the receiver.
Configuring attenuators at the transmit end is generally ineffective because it reduces power output before transmission, potentially reducing reach. This approach aligns with HCIP-Transmission best practices for optical power management and receiver protection.

NEW QUESTION # 60
Optical fiber and LEAP optical fiber systems, 100G and 10G mixed transmissions need to set up isolation bands, and only one-sided adjacency is supported, and double-sided adjacency is prohibited. 100G is preferentially configured with long wavelengths, and 10G is configured with short wavelengths.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 61
The LPT (LinkPassThrough) function is applied to the scenario where WDM equipment accesses FE/GE/10GELAN services. Which of the following are the correct statement? (Multiple choice)

- A. The LPT function can be divided into port-based LPT and service-based LPT in terms of implementation methods.
- B. It makes the user equipment perceive the link status information by turning off the group and turning on the laser of the WDM device, thereby triggering the user equipment to enable the service protection function and select the active or standby link for communication
- C. By adding overhead bytes supporting the LPT protocol to the signal frame format on the WDM side, the operating status of the network access point or service network can be monitored
- D. From the perspective of the network, ALS has similar functions to LinkPaseThrough (LinkPaseThrough), and the differences are mainly reflected in the transmission mode of applicable service faults and the laser restart mechanism.
