NEW QUESTION # 61

Tristan, a professional penetration tester, was recruited by an organization to test its network infrastructure. The organization wanted to understand its current security posture and its strength in defending against external threats. For this purpose, the organization did not provide any information about their IT infrastructure to Tristan. Thus, Tristan initiated zero-knowledge attacks, with no information or assistance from the organization.

Which of the following types of penetration testing has Tristan initiated in the above scenario?

- A. White-box testing
- B. Black-box testing
- C. Gray-box testing
- D. Translucent-box testing

Answer: B

Explanation:

Black-box testing is a type of penetration testing where the tester has no prior knowledge of the target system or network and initiates zero-knowledge attacks, with no information or assistance from the organization. Black-box testing simulates the perspective of an external attacker who tries to find and exploit vulnerabilities without any insider information. Black-box testing can help identify unknown or hidden vulnerabilities that may not be detected by other types of testing. However, black-box testing can also be time-consuming, costly, and incomplete, as it depends on the tester's skills and tools.

Maisie, a new employee at an organization, was given an access badge with access to only the first and third floors of the organizational premises. Maisie tried scanning her access badge against the badge reader at the second-floor entrance but was unsuccessful. Identify the short-range wireless communication technology used by the organization in this scenario.

- A. Li-Fi
- B. RFID
- C. Bluetooth
- D. Wi-Fi

Answer: B

Explanation:

RFID (Radio Frequency Identification) is a short-range wireless communication technology that uses radio waves to identify and track objects. RFID tags are attached to objects and RFID readers scan the tags to obtain the information stored in them. RFID is commonly used for access control, inventory management, and identification.

NEW QUESTION # 64

As the senior network analyst for a leading fintech organization, you have been tasked with ensuring seamless communication between the firm's global offices. Your network has been built with redundancy in mind, leveraging multiple service providers and a mixture of MPLS and public internet connections. One week after deploying a state-of-the-art Network Performance Monitoring & Diagnostics (NPM) tool, you notice unusual traffic patterns originating from your European data center and targeting the corporate headquarters in New York. The traffic spikes periodically, heavily utilizing the MPLS link and sometimes saturating the public internet connection, resulting in significant data packet losses and application failures. Your task is to identify the root cause of these traffic anomalies and ensure optimal network performance for all critical business operations. Given this scenario, what could be the primary cause for these traffic spikes, and what should your Immediate course of action be?

- A. Faulty Network Hardware - The network hardware in the European data center, such as routers or switches, might be malfunctioning, causing inconsistent traffic bursts. Diagnosing the hardware, checking for faults, and replacing the faulty equipment should be the immediate action.
- B. Data Backup and Replication - The European data center might be running data backup or replication processes during peak business hours. You should liaise with the data center team to reschedule backup operations to non-peak hours and ensure that backup processes are bandwidth-aware.
- C. Unauthorized Application Usage - The European data center staff might be using unauthorized applications or services that are consuming massive bandwidth. You should enforce strict Application and Network Access Control policies, and scrutinize the application traffic to restrict non business- critical applications.
- D. MPLS Link Flapping - The MPLS link might be experiencing flapping, leading to inconsistent traffic flow. It is crucial to liaise with the MPLS service provider to inspect the link stability and consider a backup link or an alternate route to reroute the traffic.

Answer: A
