NEW QUESTION # 336

Which of the following statements describes the purpose of the Transport Layer in the TCP/IP stack?

- B. Provides a data transport service to higher protocol layers.

NEW QUESTION # 337

How does address summarization reduce the routing table size?

- A. By rejecting duplicate route advertisements.
- B. By allowing a block of routes to be represented by one route.
- C. By not advertising directly connected routes.
- D. By only keeping the best routes in the routing table.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Address summarization(also called route aggregation) is a technique used in IP routing to combine several contiguous network prefixes into a single summarized route.

This reduces the number of routes that need to be advertised and stored in routing tables, improving scalability and performance.

* Option A is correct- summarization replaces many specific routes with a single aggregated route.

* Option B refers to best path selection (not summarization).

* Option C is incorrect; duplicate advertisements are still processed and filtered based on metrics.

* Option D is unrelated to summarization; directly connected routes are always advertised unless specifically filtered.
