APICS Certified in Planning and Inventory Management (CPIM 8.0) Sample Questions (Q400-Q405):

NEW QUESTION # 400

The cost accountant has discovered a consistent overage in actual run time for one operation. This information should be sent first to the:

- A. the engineering manager to evaluate the run time for the routing.
- B. production supervisor to review and explain the overage.
- C. quality manager to add a new quality measurement to the operation.
- D. product manager to increase the selling price of the product.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The production supervisor is the most appropriate person to send the information about the overage in actual run time for one operation. The production supervisor is responsible for overseeing the execution of the production plan and ensuring that the operations are performed efficiently and effectively. The production supervisor can review the actual run time data and compare it with the planned run time, identify the possible causes of the overage, and take corrective actions if needed. The production supervisor can also explain the overage to the cost accountant and other stakeholders, such as the product manager, the quality manager, and the engineering manager, and provide feedback for improving the planning and routing of the operation.
