NEW QUESTION # 16

An organization has limited resources to spend on corporate social responsibility initiatives. Which is the most suitable approach to determine how these resources should be used?

- A. Support a mix of environmental economic and social initiatives to ensure a balanced approach is taken
- B. Survey employees and external stakeholders to see which causes are best suited to the organization.
- C. Conduct a financial analysis to determine where the most impact can be made with the budget available
- D. Select corporate social responsibility initiatives that support the overall strategic goals of the organization

Answer: D

Explanation:

The most suitable approach for an organization with limited resources to spend on corporate social responsibility (CSR) initiatives is to select initiatives that support the overall strategic goals of the organization. Aligning CSR initiatives with the organization's strategic goals ensures that resources are used effectively and contribute to long-term value creation. This approach helps in enhancing the organization's reputation, stakeholder engagement, and competitive advantage by focusing on areas where the organization can make the most significant impact in alignment with its mission and values.

The IIA Standards: Standard 2010 - Planning: "The chief audit executive must establish a risk-based plan to determine the priorities of the internal audit activity, consistent with the organization's goals." IIA Practice Guide: "Assessing Organizational Governance in the Public Sector": Highlights the importance of aligning initiatives with strategic goals for effective governance.
