This stage involves exploring and then committing to a vocational choice that matches one's abilities and aspirations. "The realistic stage is marked by the integration of capacities, interests, and values as individuals make final career decisions." Reference: Helwig, A. A. (2020). The coefficient of determination, which is found by computing the square of the correlation coefficient between two sets of scores, represents the

- A. percentage of error variance unique to each of the variables.
- B. maximum possible reliability coefficient for either measure.
- C. percentage of variance in one variable predictable from the other variable.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The coefficient of determination is the square of the correlation coefficient (r^2) and represents the proportion of variance in one variable that can be predicted from the other variable. For example, an r of .50 yields an r^2 of .25, meaning 25% of the variance in one variable can be predicted from the other.
