NEW QUESTION # 19

Which one of the following is not used in a horizontal discovery pattern?

- A. Connectivity section
- B. Variables
- C. Identification section
- D. Operations

Answer: A

Explanation:

A horizontal discovery pattern is a sequence of operations that collects information about a specific type of configuration item (CI), such as an operating system, a database, or a web server¹. A horizontal discovery pattern does not use the connectivity section, which is only used for the application pattern type². The connectivity section defines how to connect to a CI and run commands on it³. A horizontal discovery pattern uses the following sections¹:

* Variables: Defines the variables that store the data collected by the pattern and map them to the target table fields.

* Identification: Defines the criteria to identify a CI and update or create a record in the CMDB.

* Operations: Defines the actions to perform on the target CI, such as running commands, querying databases, or parsing files.
