CompTIA SecurityX Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q145-Q150):

NEW QUESTION # 145

The identity and access management team is sending logs to the SIEM for continuous monitoring. The deployed log collector is forwarding logs to the SIEM. However, only false positive alerts are being generated. Which of the following is the most likely reason for the inaccurate alerts?

- A. The retention policy is not property configured
- B. The data is not being properly parsed
- C. The SIEM indexes are 100 large

- D. The compute resources are insufficient to support the SIEM

Answer: B

Explanation:

Proper parsing of data is crucial for the SIEM to accurately interpret and analyze the logs being forwarded by the log collector. If the data is not parsed correctly, the SIEM may misinterpret the logs, leading to false positives and inaccurate alerts. Ensuring that the log data is correctly parsed allows the SIEM to correlate and analyze the logs effectively, which is essential for accurate alerting and monitoring.

NEW QUESTION # 146

The security team is receiving escalated support tickets stating that one of the company's publicly available websites is not loading as expected. Given the following observations:

Server	URL	Installed certificate	Age of installed certificate
SALES10	www.sales.com	*.sales.com	282 days
SALES10	fulfillment.sales.com	*.sales.com	282 days
WEB27	www.website.com	website.com	418 days
SALES20	tracking.sales.com	tracking.sales.com	240 days
EVENT2	event.sales.com	event.sales.com	57 days

Which of the following is most likely the root cause?

- A. A protocol mismatch error is expected to occur when using outdated browsers.
- B. One certificate is being bound to multiple websites on the same server.
- C. Subject alternative names were not used appropriately for subdomains.
- D. A certificate signed by a global root certification authority has expired.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 147

Company A and Company D ate merging Company A's compliance reports indicate branch protections are not in place A security analyst needs to ensure that potential threats to the software development life cycle are addressed. Which of the following should me analyst cons<der when completing this basic?

- A. If DAST code is being stored to a single code repository
- B. If developers are unable to promote to production
- C. If DAST scans are routinely scheduled
- D. If role-based training is deployed

Answer: C

Explanation:

Dynamic Application Security Testing (DAST) is crucial for identifying and addressing security vulnerabilities during the software development life cycle (SDLC). Ensuring that DAST scans are routinely scheduled helps in maintaining a secure development process.

Why Routine DAST Scans?

* Continuous Security Assessment: Regular DAST scans help in identifying vulnerabilities in real-time, ensuring they are addressed promptly.

* Compliance: Routine scans ensure that the development process complies with security standards and regulations.

* Proactive Threat Mitigation: Regular scans help in early detection and mitigation of potential security threats, reducing the risk of breaches.

* Integration into SDLC: Ensures security is embedded within the development process, promoting a security-first approach.

Other options, while relevant, do not directly address the continuous assessment and proactive identification of threats:

* A. If developers are unable to promote to production: This is more of an operational issue than a security assessment.

* B. If DAST code is being stored to a single code repository: This concerns code management rather than security testing frequency.

* D. If role-based training is deployed: While important, training alone does not ensure continuous security assessment.

NEW QUESTION # 148

Third parties notified a company's security team about vulnerabilities in the company's application. The security team determined these vulnerabilities were previously disclosed in third-party libraries. Which of the following solutions best addresses the reported vulnerabilities?

- A. Integrating a SAST tool as part of the pipeline
- B. Creating a bug bounty program
- C. Implementing a continuous security assessment program
- D. Using IaC to include the newest dependencies

Answer: A

Explanation:

The best solution to address reported vulnerabilities in third-party libraries is integrating a Static Application Security Testing (SAST) tool as part of the development pipeline.

Early Detection: SAST tools analyze source code for vulnerabilities before the code is compiled.

This allows developers to identify and fix security issues early in the development process.

Continuous Security: By integrating SAST tools into the CI/CD pipeline, the organization ensures continuous security assessment of the codebase, including third-party libraries, with each code commit and build.

Comprehensive Analysis: SAST tools provide a detailed analysis of the code, identifying potential vulnerabilities in both proprietary code and third-party dependencies, ensuring that known issues in libraries are addressed promptly.

NEW QUESTION # 149

A systems administrator wants to reduce the number of failed patch deployments in an organization. The administrator discovers that system owners modify systems or applications in an ad hoc manner. Which of the following is the best way to reduce the number of failed patch deployments?

- A. Situational awareness
- B. Compliance tracking
- C. Quality assurance
- D. Change management

Answer: D

Explanation:

To reduce the number of failed patch deployments, the systems administrator should implement a robust change management process. Change management ensures that all modifications to systems or applications are planned, tested, and approved before deployment. This systematic approach reduces the risk of unplanned changes that can cause patch failures and ensures that patches are deployed in a controlled and predictable manner.
