- A. The DR address is 10.1.1.1
- B. Router ID indicates that the local router ID is 10.1.1.1.
- C. Address: 10.1.1.1 Indicates that the local interface address is 10.1.1.1.
- D. Through negotiation during DD packet exchange, the local end becomes the slave.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The command output indicates that the OSPF neighbor state is Full and that the neighbor relationship has been established. The statement confirms that the negotiation process during the exchange of DD (Database Description) packets has determined the role of the router, with the local device becoming the slave in the Master-Slave relationship, which is critical for LSA synchronization. The other options do not align with the output or OSPF principles.
