AACN CCRN (Adult) - Direct Care Eligibility Pathway Sample Questions (Q705-Q710):

NEW QUESTION # 705

Which of the following is NOT a recommended technique provided by the AACN for ensuring the proper placement of an enteral feeding tube?

- A. Observe for signs of respiratory distress
- B. Auscultate over the epigastrium while administering an air bolus
- C. Measure the pH of aspirates
- D. Use capnography

Answer: B

Explanation:

There are four recommended techniques provided by the American Association of Colleges of Nursing (AACN) Practice Alert for preventing aspiration in adults when inserting an enteral feeding tube. These include:

- * Observing for signs of respiratory distress
- * Using capnography to detect inadvertent placement in the lungs
- * Measuring the pH of aspirates
- * Observing for visual signs of gastric aspirates

Auscultate over the epigastrium while administering an air bolus is not one of the AACN's recommended techniques.

NEW QUESTION # 706

The nurse is caring for a patient and notes a murmur upon auscultation at the apex of the heart. Which of the following valvular disorders should the nurse suspect based on this finding, which is often associated with dilated cardiomyopathy?

- A. Aortic stenosis
- B. Mitral valve defect
- C. Pulmonic insufficiency
- D. Tricuspid valve defect

Answer: B

Explanation:

When the nurse auscultates a murmur at the apex, it may be related to a mitral valve defect. Murmurs of the mitral valve are loudest at the apex. Damage to the mitral valve can affect the valve's ability to close properly. During ventricular systole, as blood is ejected forward into the aorta, blood is, also, ejected backward through the insufficient mitral valve, causing an abnormal blood flow (murmur) that contributes to an increase in left atrial volume, pressure, and eventually dilation. Over time, the left ventricle dilates and hypertrophies, leading to dilated cardiomyopathy.

NEW QUESTION # 707

A charge nurse is planning staffing for the evening shift after having two nurses call out sick. Which of the following AACN Synergy Model competencies is the nurse exhibiting?

- A. Collaboration
- B. Advocacy and moral agency
- C. This action is not exhibiting one of the AACN Synergy Model competencies
- D. Systems thinking

Answer: D

Explanation:

The AACN Synergy Model is the source of content for 20% of the CCRN, making this concept a central component of the test.

The eight components of the AACN Synergy Model are:

- * Clinical judgement
- * Advocacy and moral agency
- * Caring practices
- * Collaboration
- * Systems thinking
- * Response to diversity
- * Facilitation of learning
- * Clinical inquiry

Systems thinking involves critical thinking regarding the system through which healthcare is provided.

Planning to ensure that adequate staff levels are present to provide care is an example of systems thinking.

NEW QUESTION # 708

Pain in the elderly patient is often reported differently than that of a younger patient due to all of the following changes that accompany aging EXCEPT:

- A. physiological
- B. cultural
- C. psychological
- D. social

Answer: D

Explanation:

Social changes may occur with age, but are not related to pain like other aging related changes.

Psychological, physiologic, and cultural changes occur with aging; some elderly patients may fear loss of control or independence, or may even associate pain with impending death. For these reasons, elderly patients may not report their pain accurately, as if to deny pain is to deny death. It is important for nurses to incorporate behavioral or physiologic indicators of pain into a variety of pain assessment strategies when caring for elderly patients.

NEW QUESTION # 709

A 35-year-old male patient with a history of drug abuse is admitted to the ICU for severe pneumonia. He expresses a desire to leave the hospital Against Medical Advice (AMA). As the patient's nurse, what should you do FIRST?

- A. Place the patient in restraints
- B. Call security to prevent the patient from leaving
- C. Ensure the patient signs the AMA form prior to leaving
- D. Explain the risks associated with leaving AMA to the patient

Answer: D

Explanation:

The nurse's first responsibility is to the patient, ensuring their safety and recognizing their right to autonomy. The nurse should explain the potential risks and consequences associated with leaving AMA to ensure the patient's decision is informed. For legal purposes, the nurse should ensure the patient signs an AMA form prior to leaving; however, it is more important that patient safety is prioritized than to ensure legal paperwork is completed. Calling security or placing the patient in restraints are not appropriate responses as they do not respect the patient's autonomy.
