```
Account a = new Account();
Database.insert(a, false);
```

- A. The record will not be created and no error will be reported.
- B. The record will be created and no error will be reported.
- C. The record will be created and a message will be in the debug log.
- D. The record will not be created and an exception will be thrown.

Answer: D

Explanation:

* Based on the provided code, an exception is likely being thrown if a required field is missing or if there are validation rules that the record does not meet. Salesforce will throw an exception when an attempt to create a record violates constraints.

Why not other options?

- * B: Salesforce reports errors for failed DML operations unless they are handled in a try-catch block.
- * C: The record cannot be created successfully if constraints are violated.
- * D: Debug logs may provide details, but the record creation would fail.
