Splunk Core Certified Power User Exam Sample Questions (Q176-Q181):

NEW QUESTION # 176

Why would the transaction command be used instead of the stats command?

- A. The transaction command is less resource-intensive.
- B. The transaction command keeps the raw data for each event.
- C. The transaction command has better search-time performance.
- D. The transaction command can perform calculations on fields.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The transaction command is used when you need to group events and preserve the raw event data. This is essential in situations where context is important and you need to maintain the original details of each event.

NEW QUESTION # 177

A field alias has been created based on an original field. A search without any transforming commands is then executed in Smart Mode. Which field name appears in the results?

- A. Both will appear in the All Fields list, but only if the alias is specified in the search.
- B. The alias only appears in the All Fields list and the original field only appears in the Interesting Fields list.
- C. Both will appear in the Interesting Fields list, but only if they appear in at least 20 percent of events.
- D. The original field only appears in All Fields list and the alias only appears in the Interesting Fields list.

Answer: C

Explanation:

A field alias is a way to assign an alternative name to an existing field without changing the original field name or value². You can use field aliases to make your field names more consistent or descriptive across different sources or sourcetypes². When you run a search without any transforming commands in Smart Mode, Splunk automatically identifies and displays interesting fields in your results². Interesting fields are fields that appear in at least 20 percent of events or have high variability among values². If you have created a field alias based on an original field, both the original field name and the alias name will appear in the Interesting Fields list if they meet these criteria². However, only one of them will appear in each event depending on which one you have specified in your search string². Therefore, option B is correct, while options A, C and D are incorrect.
