The server.js Node.js script runs after the Dockerfile creates its container. What is the working directory of the application inside the container?

- A. `/app`
- B. `/source`
- C. `/app/production`
- D. `/app/source`

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the given Dockerfile, the `WORKDIR /app` command sets the working directory for any subsequent commands to `/app`. This means that any commands following this line will be executed within the `/app` directory inside the Docker container. The `COPY . .` command copies the contents of the current directory on the host machine to the `/app` directory in the container. Finally, the `CMD`

["node", "source/server.js"] command specifies the command to run when the container starts, which in this case is node source/server.js.
