ARDMS AE Adult Echocardiography Examination Sample Questions (Q27-Q32):

NEW QUESTION # 27

Which method is useful for obtaining a good quality pulmonary vein spectral Doppler waveform for evaluation of diastolic function?

- A. Use of non-imaging transducer

- B. Use of continuous wave Doppler
- C. Doppler wall filter settings changed to allow for low frequency signals
- D. Doppler wall filter settings changed to filter out low frequency signals

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

Pulmonary vein Doppler signals have low velocity and low frequency components that can be filtered out by standard Doppler wall filters. To obtain a good quality spectral Doppler waveform for diastolic function evaluation, the wall filter settings should be lowered or adjusted to allow low frequency signals to be detected and displayed clearly.

Non-imaging transducers and continuous wave Doppler are not appropriate for pulmonary vein Doppler because spatial resolution and site localization are required. Filtering out low frequency signals would degrade the quality of the pulmonary vein waveform.

This is detailed in ASE Doppler imaging and diastolic function assessment protocols#12:ASE Diastolic Function Guidelinesp.85-90##16:Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography, 6ep.125-130#.

NEW QUESTION # 28

What is indicated by the arrow on this video clip?

- A. Chiari network
- B. Eustachian valve
- C. False tendon
- D. Moderator band

Answer: D

Explanation:

The structure indicated by the arrow in the right ventricle is the moderator band. The moderator band is a muscular band of tissue that crosses the right ventricular cavity from the interventricular septum to the anterior papillary muscle. It contains part of the right bundle branch of the conduction system and is a normal anatomical structure identifiable on echocardiography.

False tendons are fibrous or muscular strands within the left ventricle, not the right. The Chiari network is a mobile, net-like structure in the right atrium near the inferior vena cava and atrial septum. The Eustachian valve is a crescent-shaped ridge at the entrance of the inferior vena cava into the right atrium.

The moderator band is important to recognize to avoid misinterpretation as a pathological mass or thrombus.

This is detailed in the "Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography, 6e", Chapter on Right Ventricular Anatomy and Echocardiographic Landmarks#20:150-155Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography#.

NEW QUESTION # 29

Which type of rendering is primarily utilized with three-dimensional echocardiography?

- A. Volume
- B. Planar
- C. External
- D. Surface

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

Three-dimensional echocardiography (3D echo) primarily uses volume rendering to provide a realistic and spatially accurate representation of cardiac structures. Volume rendering processes a full dataset of voxels (3D pixels) to produce detailed images, allowing clinicians to visualize complex anatomical relationships in real time.

Surface rendering is another technique but primarily used in post-processing to create a solid surface model; it is less used in live 3D echocardiography.

Planar and external rendering are not standard terms in 3D echocardiography.

This information is presented in the "Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography, 6e", Chapter on Advanced Echocardiographic Imaging Techniques#20:400-405Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography#.

NEW QUESTION # 30

Which view is best used to evaluate a bicuspid aortic valve?

- A. Right sternal border
- B. Apical long axis
- C. Apical five-chamber
- D. Parasternal short axis

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract:

The parasternal short axis view at the level of the aortic valve is optimal for evaluating valve morphology, including detection of bicuspid aortic valve (BAV). This view clearly visualizes the valve leaflets en face during systole.

Right sternal border and apical views provide hemodynamic information but are less optimal for detailed valve anatomy. Apical long axis is better for left ventricular and outflow tract evaluation but limited for valve leaflet number.

This is described in the "Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography, 6e", Chapter on Aortic Valve Morphology and Congenital Anomalies#20:350-355Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography#.

NEW QUESTION # 31

What is the direction of the mitral regurgitant jet in this video clip?

- A. Medial
- B. Anterior
- C. Posterior
- D. Lateral

Answer: C

Explanation:

The color Doppler jet in the apical four-chamber view is directed posteriorly toward the posterior left atrial wall, indicating a posteriorly directed mitral regurgitant jet.

Jet direction can provide insight into the mechanism of mitral regurgitation; for example, anterior leaflet prolapse often causes a posteriorly directed jet.

This analysis is outlined in the "Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography, 6e", Chapter on Mitral Regurgitation - Jet Direction and Mechanism#20:390-395Textbook of Clinical Echocardiography#.
