WGU Organizational Behavior (GTO1, C715) Sample Questions (Q26-Q31):

NEW QUESTION # 26

How can an organization transmit its culture to its employees?

- A. By creating and repeating ritualistic activities

- B. By studying employee gripes and complaints
- C. By influencing the balance of cultural backgrounds of employees
- D. By requiring employees to memorize the mission statement

Answer: A

Explanation:

Culture is transmitted to employees in several ways, most notably through stories, rituals, material symbols, and language. Rituals are repetitive sequences of activities that express and reinforce the key values of the organization—what goals are most important, which people are important, and which are expendable. For example, a company might hold an annual awards ceremony that celebrates "risk-taking," thereby reinforcing a culture of innovation more effectively than a written document could.

These ritualistic activities serve as a physical manifestation of the organization's underlying values. While mission statements (Option A) provide a formal overview, they often fail to capture the "lived experience" of the culture. Similarly, while the selection process influences who enters the organization, the transmission of culture happens after hiring through consistent, repeated social practices. By engaging in these rituals, employees internalize the organization's norms and expectations, transforming them from "outsiders" to "insiders" who understand the shared organizational meaning.

NEW QUESTION # 27

What defines acceptable standards of behavior that are shared by group members?

- A. Group norms
- B. Group roles
- C. Group status
- D. Group conformity

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 28

Which characteristic describes an advantage of a virtual team as compared with other types of teams?

- A. People can work together who might otherwise not be able to collaborate on a work task.
- B. Verbal and nonverbal communication cues are easier to understand within a virtual team.
- C. Virtual team members generally report greater satisfaction with the group interaction process.
- D. The greater opportunity for interaction helps increase rapport.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Virtual teams use computer technology to unite physically dispersed members in order to achieve a common goal. The defining advantage of virtual teams is their ability to overcome the constraints of time and space, allowing people to work together who might otherwise not be able to collaborate on a work task. This is particularly beneficial for global organizations that need to pull together the best experts regardless of where they are located in the world.

Image of virtual team collaboration

However, virtual teams face unique challenges compared to face-to-face teams. Because they rely on electronic communication, they often suffer from a lack of nonverbal cues (like body language and tone of voice), which makes communication less rich and more prone to misunderstanding. Consequently, virtual teams often report lower levels of satisfaction with the interaction process and may take longer to build trust and rapport (refuting options B and D). To be effective, managers of virtual teams must ensure that the team has the right technology, that progress is closely monitored, and that efforts are made to create "social presence" through occasional video calls or face-to-face meetings to build the trust that forms more naturally in traditional office settings. Despite these hurdles, the strategic benefit of accessing diverse talent from across the globe makes the virtual team an essential tool in the modern organizational landscape.

NEW QUESTION # 29

Which dimension of the Fiedler contingency model is associated with the degree of influence a leader has over variables such as hiring, firing, discipline, promotions, and salary increases?

- A. Leader-member exchange
- B. Position power
- C. Leader-member relations
- D. Task structure

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Fiedler contingency model proposes that effective group performance depends on the proper match between the leader's style and the degree to which the situation gives control to the leader. Fiedler identified three contingency dimensions that define the situational favorableness: Leader-member relations, Task structure, and Position power.

Image of Fiedler's Contingency Model

Situation	Favorable			Moderate		Unfavorable
Category	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Leader-member Relations	Good	Good	Good	Good	Poor	Poor	Poor	Poor
Task Structure	High	High	Low	Low	High	High	Low	Low
Leader Position Power	Strong	Weak	Strong	Weak	Strong	Weak	Strong	Weak

PassLeader

Position power is specifically defined as the degree of influence a leader has over power variables such as hiring, firing, discipline, promotions, and salary increases. A leader with high position power has significant structural authority, which makes it easier to influence the behavior of subordinates through formal rewards and sanctions. In contrast, a leader with low position power must rely more heavily on personal influence or rapport to achieve goals. Understanding these dimensions is crucial because Fiedler argued that a leader's style is essentially fixed; therefore, to improve effectiveness, one must either change the leader to fit the situation or change the situation (such as increasing or decreasing the leader's position power) to fit the leader.

NEW QUESTION # 30

Although team performance has been fairly good, members feel that more could be done to improve their effectiveness. They feel that some team members could be more collaborative. Which type of reward system could be used effectively in this situation?

- A. A system that emphasizes group rewards for maximizing productivity
- B. A system that emphasizes rewards for individual contributions as well as for selfless contributions
- C. A system that emphasizes group rewards based on aggressive competitiveness
- D. A system that emphasizes individual rewards for aggressive competitiveness

Answer: B

Explanation:

Designing an effective reward system for teams requires a delicate balance between individual and collective incentives. If the reward system focuses solely on individual achievement, it can foster internal competition and discourage the very collaboration the team is lacking. Conversely, if it focuses only on the group, "social loafing" may occur where some members coast on the efforts of others. To improve effectiveness and collaboration, the organization should implement a system that emphasizes rewards for individual contributions as well as for selfless contributions. This means that while members are recognized for their technical proficiency, they are also evaluated and rewarded for being "good team players"-sharing information, helping colleagues, and resolving conflicts. Rewarding "selfless contributions" directly addresses the concern that members need to be more collaborative. This dual-focus approach ensures that individuals are motivated to perform their specific tasks at a high level while simultaneously being incentivized to support the team's overall synergy.
