Microsoft Designing and Implementing Cloud-Native Applications Using Microsoft Azure Cosmos DB Sample Questions (Q103-Q108):

NEW QUESTION # 103

You plan to create an operational system that will store data in an Azure Cosmos DB or NoSQL account.

You need to configure the account to meet the following requirements:

*Support Spark queries.

*Support the analysis of data from the last six months.

*Only pay for analytical compute when running queries.

Which three actions should you perform? Each correct answer presents part of the solution. NOTE Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. Create an Azure Synapse linked service.
- B. Create a container and set the time to live to six months.
- C. Create an Azure Databricks notebook.
- D. Create a container and set the analytical property to six months.
- E. Create an Azure Synapse pipeline.
- F. Enable Azure Synapse Link for the account

Answer: C,D,F

NEW QUESTION # 104

You are designing a data model for an Azure Cosmos DB for NoSQL account.

What are the partition limits for request units per second (RU/s) and storage? To answer, select the appropriate options in the answer area.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

Answer:

Explanation:

NEW QUESTION # 105

You have a container in an Azure Cosmos DB Core (SQL) API account. The container stores telemetry data from IoT devices. The container uses telemetryId as the partition key and has a throughput of 1,000 request units per second (RU/s). Approximately 5,000 IoT devices submit data every five minutes by using the same telemetryId value.

You have an application that performs analytics on the data and frequently reads telemetry data for a single IoT device to perform trend analysis.

The following is a sample of a document in the container.

You need to reduce the amount of request units (RUs) consumed by the analytics application.

What should you do?

- A. Decrease the offerThroughput value for the container.
- B. Increase the offerThroughput value for the container.
- C. Move the data to a new container that has a partition key of deviceId.
- D. Move the data to a new container that uses a partition key of date.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The partition key is what will determine how data is routed in the various partitions by Cosmos DB and needs to make sense in the context of your specific scenario. The IoT Device ID is generally the "natural" partition key for IoT applications.

NEW QUESTION # 106

You have an Azure Cosmos DB Core (SQL) API account that uses a custom conflict resolution policy. The account has a registered merge procedure that throws a runtime exception.

The runtime exception prevents conflicts from being resolved.

You need to use an Azure function to resolve the conflicts.

What should you use?

- A. a function that pulls items from the change feed and is triggered by a timer trigger
- B. a function that receives items pushed from the conflicts feed and is triggered by an Azure Cosmos DB trigger
- C. a function that pulls items from the conflicts feed and is triggered by a timer trigger
- D. a function that receives items pushed from the change feed and is triggered by an Azure Cosmos DB trigger

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Azure Cosmos DB Trigger uses the Azure Cosmos DB Change Feed to listen for inserts and updates across partitions. The change feed publishes inserts and updates, not deletions.

NEW QUESTION # 107

You have a container in an Azure Cosmos DB for NoSQL account that stores data about orders. The following is a sample of an order document.

Documents are up to 2 KB.

You plan to receive one million orders daily.

Customers will frequently view their past order history.

You are evaluating whether to use orderDate as the partition key.

What are two effects of using orderDate as the partition key? Each correct answer presents a complete solution.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. There will always be a hot partition.
- B. You will exceed the maximum number of partition key values.
- C. You will exceed the maximum storage per partition.
- D. Queries will run cross-partition.

Answer: A,D
