Oracle Database 19c: Data Guard Administration Sample Questions (Q21-Q26):

NEW QUESTION # 21
Which three Data Guard monitoring activities may be performed using Enterprise Manager Cloud Control?

- A. You can monitor the redo apply rate on a snapshot standby database.
- B. You can set a warning threshold on the redo generation rate metric for a physical standby database.
- C. You can check the potential data loss in the event of a disaster.
- D. You can set a critical threshold on the redo generation rate metric for a primary database.
- E. You can check if redo apply needs to be tuned.
- F. You can monitor the redo apply rate on a logical standby database.

Answer: C,D,F

NEW QUESTION # 22
Which TWO are benefits of using Transaction Guard in a Data Guard environment?

- A. It provides application continuity by replaying transactions interrupted by a failover or a switchover
- B. It provides application continuity by rolling back uncommitted transactions interrupted by a failover or switchover.
- C. It protects against recoverable errors during a planned or an unplanned outage of a primary database.
- D. It protects against user errors being replicated to standby databases.
- E. It protects against logical corruptions being replicated to standby databases.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:
Transaction Guard provides benefits in terms of transaction consistency and recovery in a Data Guard environment:
It provides application continuity by rolling back uncommitted transactions interrupted by a failover or switchover (B): Transaction Guard ensures that any uncommitted transactions at the time of an outage are rolled back consistently, thus preserving the integrity of the application's data and state.
It protects against recoverable errors during a planned or an unplanned outage of a primary database (D): Transaction Guard offers protection against errors that can occur during outages, allowing applications to resume operations more quickly and reliably after recovery.

NEW QUESTION # 23
Which TWO statements are true about Real-Time Query?

- A. Real-Time Query has no limitations regarding the protection level of the Data Guard environment.
- B. Disabling Real-Time Query prevents the automatic start of redo apply when a physical standby databases opened read only.
- C. Setting standby_max_data_delay=0 requires synchronous redo transport.
- D. A standby database enabled for Real-Time Query cannot be the Fast-Start Failover target of the Data Guard configuration.
- E. Real-Time Query sessions can be connected to a Far Sync instance.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:
Real-Time Query is a feature that allows queries to be run on a physical standby database while it is applying redo data. The relevant truths about it are:
* Setting standby_max_data_delay=0 requires synchronous redo transport (A): For the real-time apply feature to function with no data delay (zero delay), synchronous redo transport must be used. This setting ensures that the data on the standby database is as current as possible before queries are executed against it.
* Disabling Real-Time Query prevents the automatic start of redo apply when a physical standby database is opened read-only (C): If Real-Time Query is disabled, opening the standby database in read-only mode will not start the redo apply process automatically. Redo apply needs to be manually started to synchronize the standby database with the primary.References:

NEW QUESTION # 24
Which four requirements can be met by deploying a logical standby database?

- A. Support for workloads requiring additional indexes.
- B. Support for workloads requiring additional materialized views.
- C. It can be used to create additional tables.
- D. It can be used for Real Application Testing without affecting the disaster recovery capabilities.
- E. It can be used to create additional schemas.
- F. It must have the same physical structure as the primary database.
- G. It must provide a disaster-recovery solution that protects all data with capability of performing switchovers and failovers.

Answer: A,B,C,D

Explanation:
A logical standby database is part of Oracle Data Guard and allows the standby database to be open for read-write operations, providing additional flexibility. The requirements met by a logical standby database include:
* Support for workloads requiring additional materialized views (A): Logical standby databases can support materialized views, allowing for complex data summarization and reporting workloads.
* It can be used to create additional tables (C): Unlike physical standby databases, logical standby databases allow for the creation of additional tables that do not exist in the primary database, enabling custom workloads and reporting.
* It can be used for Real Application Testing without affecting the disaster recovery capabilities (E):
Logical standby databases can be used to test application changes, patches, and upgrades while still maintaining their role as part of the disaster recovery strategy.
* Support for workloads requiring additional indexes (F): Logical standby databases allow for the creation of additional indexes to optimize query performance for reporting and analytical workloads.

NEW QUESTION # 25
Examine the fast-start failover configuration:
▫

- A. A failover may occur if the observer has lost connectivity to the primary database, even if the Fast-Start Failover target standby database has a good connection to the primary database
- B. You must disable fast-start failover first to change the fast-start failover target to East sales.
- C. The observer will initiate a failover when the primary database is unable to produce local archived redo log files.
- D. The observer is running.
- E. If South_Sales develops a problem and cannot be the target of a failover, the broker automatically changes the fast-start failover target to one of the other candidate targets.

Answer: A,C,D
