NEW QUESTION # 81

What is the primary reason to install a monitoring system in the data centre?

- A. To create a proper asset database
- B. To be able to collect data for capacity planning
- C. To implement automated change management
- D. To notice abnormalities early so that actions can be taken to avoid disasters

Answer: D

Explanation:

The primary reason to install a monitoring system in the data centre is to notice abnormalities early so that actions can be taken to avoid disasters, according to the CDCP Preparation Guide<sup>1</sup> and various web sources<sup>234</sup>. A monitoring system is a system that collects and analyzes data about the power, cooling, environmental, and security conditions in the data centre, and alerts the operators or managers about any issues or threats that may affect the performance, availability, or reliability of the data centre. A monitoring system can help to prevent or minimize the impact of disasters, such as power outages, fire, water damage, overheating, equipment failure, or cyberattacks, by providing timely and accurate information that enables fast and corrective action. A monitoring system can also help to improve the energy efficiency, capacity planning, and asset management of the data centre, by providing useful insights and trends that support informed decision making.

inches, according to the CDCP Preparation Guide<sup>1</sup> and OSHA regulation 29 CFR
