NEW QUESTION # 117

Which of following is NOT part of delivering the capability?

- A. Gateway reviews
- B. Governance: Manage and control delivery
- C. Align projects with benefits realization
- D. Start Projects

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 118

In which document would you expect to find the levels of confidentiality to be applied in the programme?

- A. The Information Management Strategy
- B. The Benefits Management Strategy
- C. The Quality Management Strategy
- D. The Resource Management Strategy

Answer: A

Explanation:

Levels of confidentiality and information security requirements are documented in the Information Management Strategy. This strategy sets out how information will be handled throughout the programme, covering aspects such as access rights, data classification, storage, and dissemination protocols to protect sensitive information.

The MSP Practitioner specifies: "Confidentiality details are defined in Information management strategy," indicating that this document governs the secure management of programme data and communication. It is essential that confidentiality levels are clear to prevent unauthorized access to sensitive information, which could jeopardize the programme's success or breach legal and regulatory obligations.

While Quality Management, Resource Management, and Benefits Management Strategies address different governance aspects such as assurance, resource allocation, and benefit realization, they do not primarily deal with confidentiality.

Information management is critical for stakeholder trust, compliance with legislation (e.g., GDPR), and safeguarding intellectual property or competitive advantage. Clear documentation in the Information Management Strategy ensures that all programme participants understand their responsibilities regarding confidentiality, promoting consistent and secure handling of data.

NEW QUESTION # 120

As a result of the Training Project in Tranche 3, a new onboarding process is being piloted. When new employees join the organization, they will be partnered with an experienced member of staff for their first two weeks. This will enable them to learn their new roles through observation, conversation, and hands-on experience to ensure that the increased number of gas and electricity customers is achieved.

Is this an appropriate application of the 'embed the outcomes' process, and why?

- A. No, because this new onboarding process should have been introduced when the call centres were rationalized
- B. No, because the onboarding process is an output of the Training Project, which is delivered as part of the 'deliver the capabilities' process
- C. Yes, because training from a peer should ensure that benefit measures motivate the right behaviours from new employees
- D. Yes, because a key part of this process is to provide ways for staff to explicitly share their knowledge with others

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed 200 to 250 words of Explanation From Exact Extract of project- programme-and-portfolio-management of 5th Edition MSP:

The 'Embed the outcomes' process in MSP 5th Edition is where the programme ensures that new capabilities are integrated into the daily operations of the business. A critical success factor for this process is the transition of knowledge. While projects deliver the "capability" (the onboarding process design), the process of embedding it requires ensuring that tacit knowledge (the experience of senior staff) is shared effectively with those who need to operate in the new state.

Option B is the correct answer because MSP 5th Edition highlights that embedding change is not just about following a manual; it is about cultural and behavioral shifts. The use of "observation, conversation, and hands-on experience" is a prime example of facilitating the transfer of tacit knowledge. By partnering new employees with experienced staff, the organization ensures that the "know-how" required to achieve the programme's strategic goals (like increasing customer numbers) is deeply rooted in the workforce. This peer- to-peer sharing helps the business-as-usual (BAU) environment absorb the change more naturally. While the project delivered the structure, the "Embed the outcomes" process focuses on these activities that ensure the capability is actually used and sustained. This alignment between the delivery of a project output and its operational adoption is what allows for the eventual realization of measurable benefits.

NEW QUESTION # 121

As the influence of a stakeholder increases, it is recommended that a 'higher' level of engagement is appropriate. Which of the following describes this increasing engagement?

- A. Maintain interest, active consultation, keep informed
- B. Active consultation, keep informed, maintain interest
- C. Keep informed, active consultation, maintain interest
- D. Keep informed, maintain interest, active consultation
