NEW QUESTION # 201

Which of the following methods most likely Introduces a temporary variance between the inventory balance and the inventory record?

- A. Inventory write-off
- B. Backflushing
- C. Kanban
- D. Cycle count

Answer: B

Explanation:

Backflushing is a method of inventory accounting that deducts the materials used in production from the inventory record after the completion of a product or batch. This introduces a temporary variance between the actual inventory balance and the inventory record, which should be reconciled periodically. Inventory write-off, cycle count, and kanban do not cause such a variance.

NEW QUESTION # 204

Exhibit:

Item Identification	Stock	Customer A Order Quantity	Customer B Order Quantity	Customer C Order Quantity
468	11	3	6	3
617	9	6	2	5
643	3	5	11	4

A company has prioritized customers A, B, and C, filling orders in that sequence. What are the impacts to customer service levels for customers B and C?

- A. Customer C has higher service level
- B. Customer B and C have same service level
- C. 100% service levels for B and C
- D. Customer B has higher service level

Answer: D

Explanation:

Customer service level is the percentage of customer orders that are fulfilled on time and in full. A company that prioritizes customers A, B, and C, filling orders in that sequence, will have different impacts on the service levels for customers B and C, depending on the availability of stock and the order quantities. Based on the table in the exhibit, customer B will have a higher service level than customer C, because customer B will receive all the ordered units for item 468 and item 617, while customer C will only receive partial units for item 468 and none for item 617. Customer C will also receive none of the ordered units for item 643, while customer B will receive some of them.

Therefore, customer B will have a higher percentage of orders fulfilled on time and in full than customer C.
