ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions

(Q197-Q202):

NEW QUESTION # 197

Which of the following is a factor that contributes to a successful review?

- A. Review metrics must be collected to improve the review process
- B. The author of the work product to be reviewed leads the review meeting.
- C. All participants in the review are aware they will be evaluated based on the defects they will find
- D. All participants in the review are trained to deal with the review type and its objectives.

Answer: D

Explanation:

A successful review process involves all participants being trained in the review type and understanding its objectives. This ensures that everyone can contribute effectively and understand what is expected from the review. Proper training helps to identify defects accurately and facilitates constructive feedback, leading to a more efficient and effective review process. Hence, statement C is correct according to the ISTQB CTFL syllabus.

NEW QUESTION # 198

Why should you choose a test technique?

- A. Because this way you cover the full scope of the product's functionality
- B. Because you need to match the way you test to the content of the product under test
- C. Because of the time constraints that usually accompany a test project
- D. Because choosing a test technique is a common practice in software testing

Answer: B

Explanation:

You should choose a test technique because you need to match the way you test to the content of the product under test. A test technique is a method or process for deriving and selecting test cases based on some criteria or rules. Different test techniques are suitable for different types of software products, depending on their characteristics, functionalities, requirements, specifications, risks, etc. Choosing a test technique helps to ensure that the test cases are relevant, effective, and efficient for the product under test. The other options are not correct reasons to choose a test technique. Time constraints are not a factor for choosing a test technique, but rather for prioritizing or optimizing testing activities. Covering the full scope of the product's functionality is not a guarantee of choosing a test technique, but rather a goal of testing. Choosing a test technique is not a common practice in software testing, but rather a professional skill and responsibility.

NEW QUESTION # 199

Which of the following statements best describes an advantage of the whole team approach?

- A. It allows the team to deliver software faster by skipping testing and documentation activities.
- B. It enables the team to share responsibility for quality and collaborate with stakeholders throughout the project.
- C. It fosters competition and individualism among team members to achieve higher performance.
- D. It enables a better division of labor as the team shares a common workspace in one physical location.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 200

Which of the following software development models BEST exemplifies a model that does NOT support the principle of early testing?

- A. The V-model
- B. The incremental development model
- C. The iterative development model
- D. The Waterfall model

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Waterfall model exemplifies a software development model that does not support the principle of early testing. In the Waterfall model, each phase must be completed before the next begins, which delays testing until after the completion of the earlier phases like requirements gathering and design. This can often result in finding defects later in the development cycle, making them more expensive and time-consuming to fix (ISTQB not-for-profit association) (ISTQB not-for-profit association).

NEW QUESTION # 201

Which of the following statements about the typical activities of a formal review process is TRUE?

- A. One of the main goals of the review meeting is to make sure that all participants are aware of their roles and responsibilities in the review process
- B. Choosing which standards to follow during the review process is usually made during review planning.
- C. Various review techniques that may be applied by participants during individual review are described in the ISO/IEC/IEEE 29119-3 standard.
- D. Individual review is only mandatory when the size of the work product under review is too large to cover at the review meeting

Answer: B

Explanation:

During the review planning stage, key decisions are made, including the selection of standards and procedures to be followed during the review. This planning phase ensures that the review process is structured and adheres to agreed-upon standards, which can come from industry standards such as ISO/IEC/IEEE 29119-3.

The ISTQB CTFL Syllabus v4.0 emphasizes the importance of review planning in establishing the framework and guidelines for the review process.
