IIA Essentials of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q584-Q589):

NEW QUESTION # 584

Which of the following offers the best evidence that the internal audit activity has achieved organizational independence?

- A. The mission statement and strategy of the internal audit activity demonstrates alignment to organizational objectives.
- B. The internal audit charter is drafted properly and approved by the appropriate parties.
- C. The chief audit executive reports both functionally and administratively to the CEO.
- D. An independent third party has assessed the organization's system of internal controls to be adequate and effective,

Answer: C

Explanation:

Organizational independence for the internal audit activity is best evidenced when the chief audit executive (CAE) reports functionally and administratively to the CEO. Functional reporting to the CEO or equivalent position ensures that the internal audit activity has direct access to top management, which supports its independence and the ability to carry out audits without undue influence from management. Administrative reporting to the CEO also helps align the internal audit function's objectives with those of top management, reinforcing its autonomy and authority within the organization.

IIA's International Standards for the Professional Practice of Internal Auditing regarding organizational independence.

- B. Adopt written policies and procedures for the internal audit activity, approved by the board.
- C. Establish the internal audit activity's position within the organization in an audit charter.
- D. Ensure the chief audit executive reports administratively to the audit committee.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 587

Which of the following statements is true regarding control activities'?

- A. If two organizations have identical objectives and structures their control activities would be the same
- B. Organizations that are less regulated generally have more complex control activities than highly regulated organizations
- C. Control activities should be defined for all business processes
- D. Control activities are defined by management through risk mitigation strategies

Answer: D

Explanation:

Control activities are specific actions defined by management aimed at mitigating risk to the achievement of objectives. They are part of the broader internal control framework, which management designs according to the organization's risk management strategies. These activities can vary widely across different organizations depending on the specific risks they face and the strategies management employs to mitigate these risks.
