VMware vDefend Security for VCF 5.x Administrator Sample Questions (Q18-Q23):

NEW QUESTION # 18

A security administrator suspects that a service insertion policy is not working as expected. Which NSX Manager feature can be used to validate the health status of the associated service instance?

Response:

- A. ESXi Hardware Status tab
- B. Policy Traceflow
- C. Host Profiles Dashboard
- D. Service Deployment Status under the NSX Inventory

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 19

Which interface is primarily used to create and manage firewall rules in VMware vDefend?

Response:

- A. NSX Manager Policy UI
- B. vSphere Web Client
- C. ESXi Host Client
- D. vSAN Health Service

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 20

Which of the following does the Applied To field impact?

- A. System wide rule count
- B. Per VM vNIC rule count
- C. ESX host rule count
- D. NSX Manager rule count

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the VMware vDefend Distributed Firewall (DFW), the "Applied To" field is a critical optimization feature. By default, DFW rules are applied to all workloads (Applied To: DFW). However, when you specify specific groups in the "Applied To" field, the rule is only pushed down to the specific vNICs of the virtual machines residing in those groups. This drastically reduces the size of the rule table maintained in memory on the ESXi host for each specific vNIC (the per VM vNIC rule count), improving hypervisor performance and ensuring that workloads only process rules relevant to their network traffic.

NEW QUESTION # 21

Which of the following is true regarding VMware vDefend security solutions?

- A. Provides decentralized control
- B. Eliminates the needs for additional security controls
- C. Scales linearly with the data center

- D. Requires logical networking components from VMware Cloud Foundation

Answer: C

Explanation:

The fundamental architectural advantage of a software-defined, distributed security model like VMware vDefend is its scalability. In a legacy hardware environment, if your data center traffic doubles, you must purchase and rack larger, more expensive physical firewalls to handle the choke point.

Because vDefend's Distributed Firewall and Distributed IDS run directly inside the hypervisor on every host, the security capacity scales linearly. Every time you add a new ESXi server to your vSphere cluster to increase compute capacity, you automatically and proportionally add more firewall throughput and inspection capacity to the environment without creating a centralized bottleneck. (Note: Control remains centralized via the NSX Manager, making Option B false).

NEW QUESTION # 22

Which of the following is NOT true in regard to the custom FQDN leveraged in FQDN filtering for vDefend Firewall?

- A. Supports Partial regex at the beginning of the FQDN
- B. Supports complete wild card mask for FQDN
- C. Does not support any type of partial regex
- D. Supports full FQDN name

Answer: A

Explanation:

When configuring Layer 7 Context Profiles for FQDN filtering, it is critical to understand the syntax limitations to avoid configuration errors. vDefend FQDN filtering supports exact full domain names (Option A) and complete wildcard masks (Option C, such as *.vmware.com). It also supports leading string wildcards (like *eng.vmware.com).

However, it does NOT support advanced or "partial regular expressions" (Regex) natively within the basic FQDN attribute matching engine (e.g., you cannot use regex string limiters, character classes like [a-z], or complex partial regex logic at the beginning of the string). Therefore, the statement that it "supports partial regex at the beginning of the FQDN" is the false statement.
