CompTIA A+ Core 1 Exam (2026) Sample Questions (Q499-Q504):

NEW QUESTION # 499

Which cloud characteristic allows local folders to contain updates made by users or other devices?

- A. Network share
- B. Availability
- C. Synchronization
- D. Metered utilization

Answer: C

Explanation:

Cloud storage platforms-such as OneDrive, Google Drive, and Dropbox-use synchronization to ensure that files updated on one device automatically update on all connected devices. CompTIA A+ defines synchronization as a key cloud characteristic that keeps local folders and cloud-stored versions consistent, enabling seamless multi-device collaboration.

Synchronization allows users to:

- * Modify files offline and have them sync once online
- * Access identical data on laptops, desktops, and mobile devices
- * Ensure real-time updates across multiple users or clients
- * Maintain version consistency and conflict resolution

A network share (A) is local to an organization and does not automatically sync across devices. Availability (C) relates to uptime and reliability, not file updates. Metered utilization (D) refers to cloud billing models where usage is tracked, not data syncing. Thus, synchronization is the capability that ensures local folders update dynamically whenever changes occur.

NEW QUESTION # 500

A high-end workstation with a RAID 5 array is exhibiting slow data access speeds and occasional errors when retrieving files. The technician investigates further and notices one of the hard drives in the RAID array has an amber light. Which of the following steps should the technician take to troubleshoot and resolve the issues?

- A. Reformat all drives in the RAID array to clear any software issues that might be causing the errors.
- B. Review network issues that might be causing slow speeds.
- C. Upgrade all RAID drives to higher capacity models to increase data access speeds.
- D. Replace the failing drive, and then allow the RAID controller to rebuild the array.

Answer: D

Explanation:

An amber light indicates a degraded or failing member of the RAID 5 array. Swapping in a new drive and letting the controller rebuild restores full redundancy and performance without risking data loss.

NEW QUESTION # 501

A healthcare facility is printing government documents on preprinted forms. The output has shifted downward on the paper, and the printed data is not aligned with the blank spaces on the forms. Which of the following should a technician do first?

- A. Verify that the correct paper type is loaded into the tray.
- B. Check the orientation settings of the printer.
- C. Make sure that PostScript drivers are being used.
- D. Ensure that the pickup rollers are firmly gripping the paper.

Answer: B

Explanation:

When printing on preprinted forms, correct alignment is critical because the printed text must line up precisely with predefined fields on the paper. According to CompTIA Core 1 (220-1201) printer configuration and troubleshooting objectives, incorrect orientation settings (portrait vs. landscape, or rotated output) are a common cause of print content shifting vertically or horizontally on the page. If the printer or print driver orientation does not match the layout expected by the form, the output may appear shifted downward or misaligned, even though the correct paper is loaded. Verifying and correcting the orientation setting is a quick, non-invasive first step that often resolves alignment issues without requiring hardware changes.

Verifying the paper type is important, but incorrect paper type usually affects print quality (such as smudging or feeding issues), not precise alignment. PostScript drivers are typically used for complex graphics and publishing but are not the first step for alignment problems. Pickup rollers that fail to grip paper properly usually cause jams or skewing, not consistent downward shifts. CompTIA emphasizes checking print layout and orientation settings first when dealing with alignment problems on specialized or preprinted documents.

NEW QUESTION # 502

Which of the following has the best penetration through physical objects, such as walls?

- A. NFC
- B. 6GHz
- C. 2.4GHz
- D. 5GHz

Answer: C

Explanation:

2.4GHz Wi-Fi signals have better penetration through walls and other obstacles compared to 5GHz and 6GHz. Lower frequency waves (like 2.4GHz) travel farther and are less absorbed by physical barriers.

From the CompTIA A+ 220-1101 Official Study Guide, Objective 2.5 - Compare and contrast wireless networking protocols: "The 2.4GHz frequency band offers greater range and better penetration through walls and obstacles than higher frequencies like 5GHz and 6GHz. Higher frequencies provide faster speeds but are more easily absorbed by walls." NFC (Near Field Communication) is not a Wi-Fi technology and works only over very short distances (a few centimeters).

NEW QUESTION # 503

A company policy change requires all computers to be encrypted. Which of the following technologies should a technician configure to meet this new requirement?

- A. RISC
- B. TPM
- C. NVMe
- D. ARM

Answer: B

Explanation:

A Trusted Platform Module (TPM) is a hardware chip used to enable encryption technologies such as BitLocker, providing secure key storage for system-wide encryption.
