Adobe Commerce Developer Professional Sample Questions (Q95-Q100):

NEW QUESTION # 95

An Adobe Commerce developer is asked to create a new payment method for their project. This project has administrators who use the backend to manage customer information and occasionally place orders. When testing the new payment method on the frontend everything worked as expected, however, the payment method is missing in the admin. What is a possible reason for this?

- A. In the module config.xml, the node can_use_internal was not set to true.
- B. In the module di.xml, there were no default 3DS verification types configured as a VirtualType.
- C. In the module config.xml, the boolean value for can_capture was set to false.

Answer: A

Explanation:

For a payment method to be available in the admin panel (backend), the configuration must explicitly allow its internal use. This is controlled by the can_use_internal flag in config.xml.

* Configuration for Admin Use:

* The can_use_internal flag determines if a payment method is available for admin users when placing orders from the backend. By default, this is often set to false for some custom payment methods, meaning they won't appear in the admin.

* Why Option C is Correct:

* Setting can_use_internal to true makes the payment method available for backend order creation, which is why this is the most probable reason it isn't visible in the admin.

* Options A and B do not influence the payment method's availability in the admin; they affect verification types and capture settings, respectively.

NEW QUESTION # 96

On an Adobe Commerce Cloud platform, what type of environment will be provisioned when launching the CLI for Commerce command magento-cloud environment:branch <environment-name> <parent-environment-id>?

- A. An integration environment with fresh Adobe Commerce Cloud installation.
- B. An empty integration environment without any code or database.
- C. An integration environment with the code and database from the parent environment.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The type of environment that will be provisioned when launching the CLI for Commerce command magento-cloud environment:branch <environment-name> <parent-environment-id> is an integration environment with the code and database from the parent environment. Integration environments are temporary environments that are used for testing and development purposes on the Adobe Commerce Cloud platform. They can be created from any branch of code and have their own dedicated database and services. When creating an integration environment using the CLI for Commerce command, the code and database from the parent environment are copied to the new integration environment, creating an exact replica of the parent environment. NEW QUESTION # 97

A developer is working on an Adobe Commerce Cloud project and wants to get connection data for the environment's deployed services. The developer has all of the necessary permissions to do this.

Which two options would the developer take to get the connection credentials? (Choose Two.)

- A. Connect to server via SSH and read $_ENV['services'] variable.
- B. Run the magento-cloud relationships CLI Command.
- C. Execute ece-tools env:config:show services Command.
- D. Get the data from the Project Web Interface dedicated section.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

In Adobe Commerce Cloud, connection data for deployed services (such as databases, caches, and other services) can be retrieved using different methods depending on the developer's access and the tools available.

* Using magento-cloud relationships Command:

* This CLI command retrieves the connection credentials for the services associated with the environment, such as database and Redis, directly from the command line.

* Project Web Interface:

* The Project Web Interface provides a dedicated section where developers can access service connection details, making it convenient for those who prefer a graphical interface.

* Why Options A and B are Correct:

* Both methods are valid and frequently used for accessing connection information. Option C, `ece- tools env:configshow services`, does not exist. Option D, reading `$_ENV['services']`, would require SSH access and does not provide direct connection details in a user-friendly format.

NEW QUESTION # 98

How are multiple EAV attributes belonging to the same entity grouped in the database?

- A. Based on all numeric values being stored in one table while text values are stored in the other
- B. Based on the sizes of values they contain
- C. Based on the types of values they contain

Answer: C

Explanation:

Multiple EAV attributes belonging to the same entity are grouped in the database based on their data types, such as datetime, decimal, int, text, or varchar. For example, all attributes with datetime values are stored in one table, while all attributes with text values are stored in another table.

The sizes or numeric/text values of attributes do not determine how they are grouped in the database.

Verified References: [Adobe Commerce Developer Guide - EAV data model]

Magento's EAV (Entity-Attribute-Value) model organizes attributes based on their data types to optimize storage and retrieval. Attributes are grouped into different tables based on whether they store values of types such as integer, varchar (text), decimal, datetime, etc. This organization allows Magento to efficiently manage the diverse data types associated with products, customers, and other entities, ensuring data integrity and optimizing database performance by using appropriate indexing and storage mechanisms for each data type.
