CompTIA Security+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q914-Q919):

NEW QUESTION # 914

An administrator notices that several users are logging in from suspicious IP addresses. After speaking with the users, the administrator determines that the employees were not logging in from those IP addresses and resets the affected users' passwords. Which of the following should the administrator implement to prevent this type of attack from succeeding in the future?

- A. Permissions assignment

- B. Multifactor authentication
- C. Access management
- D. Password complexity

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is A because multifactor authentication (MFA) is a method of verifying a user's identity by requiring more than one factor, such as something the user knows (e.g., password), something the user has (e.g., token), or something the user is (e.g., biometric). MFA can prevent unauthorized access even if the user's password is compromised, as the attacker would need to provide another factor to log in. The other options are incorrect because they do not address the root cause of the attack, which is weak authentication. Permissions assignment (B) is the process of granting or denying access to resources based on the user's role or identity.

Access management is the process of controlling who can access what and under what conditions. Password complexity (D) is the requirement of using strong passwords that are hard to guess or crack, but it does not prevent an attacker from using a stolen password.

NEW QUESTION # 915

A company is concerned about employees unintentionally introducing malware into the network.

The company identified fifty employees who clicked on a link embedded in an email sent by the internal IT department. Which of the following should the company implement to best improve its security posture?

- A. Insider threat awareness
- B. Simulated phishing campaign
- C. SPF configuration
- D. Social engineering training

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 916

A security analyst is reviewing logs and discovers the following:

Which of the following should be used to best mitigate this type of attack?

- A. Sandboxing
- B. Input sanitization
- C. Secure cookies
- D. Static code analysis

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 917

You are security administrator investigating a potential infection on a network.

Click on each host and firewall. Review all logs to determine which host originated the Infection and then deny each remaining hosts clean or infected.

□
□
□

Answer:

Explanation:

□ Explanation:

A screenshot of a computer AI-generated content may be incorrect.

Based on the logs, it seems that the host that originated the infection is 192.168.10.22. This host has a suspicious process named svchost.exe running on port 443, which is unusual for a Windows service. It also has a large number of outbound connections to different IP addresses on port 443, indicating that it is part of a botnet.

The firewall log shows that this host has been communicating with 10.10.9.18, which is another infected host on the engineering network. This host also has a suspicious process named svchost.exe running on port 443, and a large number of outbound connections to different IP addresses on port 443.

The other hosts on the R&D network (192.168.10.37 and 192.168.10.41) are clean, as they do not have any suspicious processes or connections.

NEW QUESTION # 918

An employee from the accounting department logs in to the website used for processing the company's payments. After logging in, a new desktop application automatically downloads on the employee's computer and causes the computer to restart. Which of the following attacks has occurred?

- A. Buffer overflow
- B. XSS
- C. Typosquatting
- D. Watering hole

Answer: D

Explanation:

A watering hole attack compromises a legitimate website frequently visited by the target, embedding malicious code that delivers malware, such as the unauthorized desktop application downloaded after the employee logged in.
