NEW QUESTION # 52

Assuming the default value for `umask`, which statements regarding permissions are true? (Choose two)

- A. The permissions on new files would be set to 444.
- B. The permissions on new directories would be set to 666.
- C. The permissions on new files would be set to 644.
- D. The permissions on new directories would be set to 755.
- E. The permissions on new files would be set to 754.
- F. The permissions on new directories would be set to 770.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Explanation

Assuming the default value for `umask`, which is 022, the permissions on new files would be set to 644 and the permissions on new directories would be set to 755. The `umask` value is subtracted from the base permissions of 666 for files and 777 for directories to determine the actual permissions. For example, $666 - 022 = 644$ for files and $777 - 022 = 755$ for directories.
