NEW QUESTION # 209

(When you configure a virtualized campus network on iMaster NCE-Campus, creating a virtual network is equivalent to creating a VPN instance to isolate different services.)

- A. FALSE
- B. TRUE

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed 200 to 250 words of Explanation From HCIP Datacom Campus Network documents knowledge without any URL or Links:

In the Huawei CloudCampus virtualized campus architecture, a Virtual Network (VN) is a logical service container used to isolate different types of services and user traffic. When a VN is created on iMaster NCE-Campus, it is internally mapped to a VPN instance on network devices. This VPN instance provides traffic isolation at the control plane and forwarding plane levels.

Each VN has its own independent routing table and forwarding context, ensuring that traffic belonging to different services cannot interfere with each other unless explicitly permitted through policy. This mechanism is similar to traditional VPN technologies and is fundamental to service segmentation in VXLAN-based campus networks.

According to HCIP Datacom Campus Network documentation, creating a VN effectively achieves service isolation in the same way as creating a VPN instance. Therefore, the statement is TRUE.

- B. Check if the MPLS LSP is established on the P device.
