- B. Type 5 LSA (AS External Route)
- C. Type 7 LSA (NSSA External Router)
- D. Type 3 LSA Inter-area summary route

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 274

In the WAN BGP protocol, if "route reflectors are configured between IBGP neighbors, and route transmission between the reflector's client and non-client is normal," then which of the following loop prevention mechanisms is in effect?

- A. IBGP split horizon (IBGP neighbors do not forward routes to each other)
- B. MED attribute loop prevention (determining route priority based on MED value)
- C. AS_PATH loop prevention (check if the route includes the local AS number)
- D. Route Reflector Cluster List Anti-loop (records reflector cluster IDs to prevent loops)

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 275

In the WAN BGP protocol, which of the following neighbor types "requires manual configuration of neighbor IP addresses and cannot be automatically discovered"?

- A. EBGP Neighbors
- B. BGP route reflector client neighbor
- C. IBGP Neighbors
- D. BGP neighboring countries

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 276

- A. Enable the MPLS protocol on the CE device and directly advertise VPNv4 routes.
- B. No configuration is required; the PE device automatically converts and publishes routes.
- C. Configure BGP VPNv4 neighbor on the P device to pass routes.
- D. Configure routing policies on the PE device to import CE routes into the BGP VPNv4 address family.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 277

(Which of the following fields is not carried in a BGP EVPN Type 2 route?)

- A. IP Prefix
- B. L3VNI
- C. L2VNI
- D. IP Address

Answer: A

Explanation:

In a VXLAN BGP EVPN network, different EVPN route types are used to advertise specific kinds of control-plane information. BGP EVPN Type 2 routes, also known as MAC/IP Advertisement routes, are primarily used to advertise Layer 2 and host-level Layer 3 reachability information between VTEPs.

According to HCIP Datacom Campus Network documentation, a Type 2 route carries MAC address information, and it can optionally carry a host IP address associated with that MAC. This enables efficient MAC learning and ARP suppression within the VXLAN fabric. The L2VNI is also included in Type 2 routes, as it identifies the Layer 2 broadcast domain to which the MAC and IP information belongs.

The L3VNI is not used to identify a Layer 2 broadcast domain but is associated with Layer 3 VPN forwarding and inter-VNI routing. While L3VNI information is relevant in EVPN-based Layer 3 services, it is not the primary identifier in a Type 2 route.

However, the key distinction in this question lies in the difference between host routes and prefix routes.

An IP prefix represents a network segment rather than a single host and is advertised using EVPN Type 5 (IP Prefix) routes, not Type 2 routes. Type 2 routes only carry host IP addresses, not IP prefixes. Therefore, IP Prefix is not carried in a BGP EVPN Type 2 route, making option C the correct answer.
