- D. Reduce the number of required approvals and expand the decision-control limits to the scrum master.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is A - Make sure the product owner is fully embedded into the project team so that they are readily available to make quick decisions.

One of the major benefits of agile is that decision-making is streamlined by having empowered roles, such as the product owner, closely embedded with the team. This reduces delays and improves the responsiveness and accuracy of decisions, especially for prioritization and clarification.

PMI Agile Practice Guide:

"Empowering the product owner and embedding them with the team ensures faster decision-making, increased feedback loops, and reduces delays." (PMI Agile Practice Guide, Section 4.2 - Stakeholder Engagement) Mike Griffiths:

"Agile teams thrive when key decision-makers, especially the product owner, are available to provide clarification and approval on the spot." (PMI-ACP Exam Prep, Chapter 3 - Value-Driven Delivery) Incorrect options:

* B is too broad and may slow decision-making further.

* C adds overhead and delays.

* D misplaces decision authority; the Scrum Master is not responsible for product decisions.
