APEGS National Professional Practice Examination (NPPE) Exam Sample Questions (Q68-Q73):

NEW QUESTION # 68

For the professional member, the duty to the client is most appropriately described in which of the following ways?

- A. It is equally as important as the member's duty to the public.
- B. It is less important if the member has strong interpersonal relationship with the client.

- C. It is second only to the member's duty to the public.
- D. It is most important if the member has no personal relationship with the client.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Professional ethics in Canadian engineering and geoscience consistently place the safeguarding of the public (and the environment) as paramount. Duties to clients and employers are significant-requiring competence, honesty, confidentiality, and faithful service-but they are subordinate to the overarching obligation to protect public welfare. Option D captures this hierarchy: the duty to the client is important, but it is second only to the duty to the public. Option C is incorrect because it implies equal priority; in ethical conflicts, public safety and welfare take precedence. Options A and B incorrectly suggest that the duty varies based on personal relationship; ethical duties do not become weaker or stronger because of interpersonal familiarity. Instead, personal relationships may introduce conflicts of interest that require disclosure and management, not a change in the fundamental duty owed. NPPE framing emphasizes that professionals must serve clients diligently while refusing to compromise safety, regulatory compliance, or truthful communication, even if that conflicts with client preferences.

NEW QUESTION # 69

A party bringing forward electronic documents as evidence in a court case needs to authenticate the electronic documents by

- A. providing examples of other cases where the same or similar evidence was presented
- B. providing a signed letter describing why the electronic document was presented
- C. proving the integrity of the system that created and stored the document
- D. proving the likelihood of success when using electronic documents in legal situations

Answer: C

Explanation:

Electronic evidence must be shown to be what it purports to be. In Canadian evidence law principles commonly referenced in NPPE materials, authentication of an electronic record generally involves demonstrating the reliability and integrity of the electronic records system used to create, transmit, receive, and store the record. This includes showing that the system was operating properly, that access controls and audit trails exist as appropriate, and that the record has not been altered. Option A captures this requirement: proving the integrity of the system that created and stored the document. Options B, C, and D do not establish authenticity. A signed letter explaining why evidence is presented (B) is not proof of authenticity; prior cases (C) do not prove the specific record is genuine; and "likelihood of success" (D) is irrelevant to admissibility. Therefore, A is correct.

NEW QUESTION # 70

In each of the following situations, a licensed professional is Behaving unprofessionally. In which case would the professional be least likely subject to disciplinary action for negligence?

- A. A professional working on a building design decided not to use the latest building codes as part of the design because It would cost more money and delay the project.
- B. A professional who recently moved to a new city designed a new stormwater management system based on standards that the professional had previously used, unaware that different standards were used in the new city.
- C. A professional managing a large construction project frequently took small amounts of money from the project for use in online gambling games.
- D. A professional stamped construction drawings for a new bridge across a river without thoroughly checking them in order to prevent any further project delays.

Answer: B

Explanation:

In situation D, the professional designed a stormwater management system based on standards previously used, unaware of different local standards. This scenario reflects a genuine error due to unfamiliarity rather than negligence, as negligence requires a breach of duty of care knowingly or recklessly disregarding professional standards. The scenarios in A, B, and C involve intentional or reckless disregard for professional standards, making D the least likely for disciplinary action for negligence.

NEW QUESTION # 71

Engineers Canada and Geoscientists Canada are the national umbrella organizations of the provincial and territorial associations that regulate professional practice in their respective Jurisdictions.

One of the many duties of Engineers Canada and Geoscientists Canada is to

- A. ensure that each regulator meets their mandated professional and ethical responsibilities
- B. settle disputes and grievances within the provincial and territorial regulatory bodies
- C. implement national regulations to ensure uniform licensing procedures across Canada
- D. promote national consistency in licensing and regulating of their respective professions

Answer: D

Explanation:

Engineers Canada and Geoscientists Canada, as national umbrella organizations, focus on promoting national consistency in licensing and regulating the engineering and geoscience professions across Canada. This role includes ensuring that provincial and territorial regulatory bodies maintain uniform standards and practices, thereby fostering a coherent national framework for these professions .

NEW QUESTION # 72

Ethics is the study of

- A. morality
- B. duties
- C. history
- D. laws

Answer: A

Explanation:

In NPPE terminology, ethics refers to the systematic study of morality-principles and values that guide what people ought to do. It addresses questions about right and wrong conduct, good and bad actions, fairness, integrity, and responsibility, especially where rules do not give a complete answer. This is distinct from law:

laws are enforceable rules established by governments, whereas ethical obligations can be broader than legal minimums and often focus on professional duties to the public, clients, employers, and the profession.

"Duties" (C) relates more specifically to deontology (duty-based ethical theory), which is one approach within ethics rather than the definition of ethics itself. "History" (B) is unrelated. Professional ethics in engineering /geoscience uses these moral principles to shape expected conduct-such as holding paramount public safety, acting with honesty and integrity, avoiding conflicts of interest, maintaining confidentiality where appropriate, and practicing only within competence.

Therefore, the best definition is that ethics is the study of morality (A).
