- B. Set a Unit of Measure for case to a Qty. of 1.
- C. Set a Unit of Measure for case to a Qty. of 10.
- D. Add a Code and Description to the Units of Measure table.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Comprehensive Detailed Explanation

The requirement in the case study is that the company warehouses products as Case quantities but wants to expand capabilities by setting up all inventory in a quantity of Each. This means they need to configure Units of Measure (UoM) so that one item can be managed both by Case and by Each.

In Business Central:

- * Units of Measure Table - defines the available unit codes (e.g., EACH, CASE, BOX) with descriptions.
- * To use Case as a unit, you must first define it in the Units of Measure table.
- * Correct: D. Add a Code and Description to the Units of Measure table.
- * Item Units of Measure (Qty. per UoM) - links the item to multiple units of measure and specifies conversion (e.g., 1 Case = 10 Each).
- * For example, if a Case = 10 Each, you set Qty. per Unit of Measure = 10 for Case.
- * Correct: A. Set a Unit of Measure for case to a Qty. of 10.
- * Why the other options are incorrect:
  - * B. Qty. per UoM = 1 is redundant (default Each already equals 1). It does not meet the requirement for Case-to-Each conversion.
  - * C. Case with Qty. = 1 would make Case = Each, which is incorrect because Case must represent multiple units (10 Each).
