NEW QUESTION # 304

When can a pipe follow a macro?

- A. The current user must own the macro.

- B. The macro must be defined in the current app.
- C. A pipe may always follow a macro.
- D. Only when sharing is set to global for the macro.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

A macro is a way to save a segment of a search string as a variable and reuse it in other searches<sup>2</sup>. A macro can be followed by a pipe, which is a symbol that separates commands in a search pipeline<sup>2</sup>. A pipe may always follow a macro, regardless of who owns the macro, where the macro is defined or how the macro is shared<sup>2</sup>. For example, if you have a macro called `us_sales` that returns events from the US region, you can use it in a search like this: `us_sales | stats sum(price) by product`<sup>2</sup>. This search will use the macro to filter the events and then calculate the total price for each product<sup>2</sup>. Therefore, option A is correct, while options B, C and D are incorrect because they are not conditions that affect whether a pipe can follow a macro.

NEW QUESTION # 305

Consider the following search:

`Index=web sourcetype=access_combined`

The log shows several events that share the same JSESSIONID value (SD404K289O2F151). View the events as a group. From the following list, which search groups events by JSESSIONID?
